U.S. Again Bombs North

WASHINGTON (CP)—The United States has resumed full-scale bombing of North Vietnam and will continue until Hanoi agrees to a settlement of the war, the White House announced today.

The White House said President Nixon ordered the resumption of bombing of North Vietnam "to cope with another enemy buildup" and forestall a possible Communist offensive.

Presidential press secretary Ronald Ziegler refused to link Nixon's decision to the current stalemate in the peace talks. He said the "road to a negotiated peace is wide open. We want a rapid settlement." (See Kissinger report on Page 3.)

Ziegler said the action is consistent with the policy Nixon outlined in a May 8 speech and said the policy "will continue until such time as a settlement is arrived at . . ."

In a televised speech May 8, Nixon said the full-scale bombing of North Vietnam and the mining of its harbors would continue until there was a ceasefire throughout Indochina and all American prisoners had been released by Hanoi.

Defence Secretary Melvin Laird made the first Washington announcement of the lifting of restrictions.

He told reporters: "Air operations are being conducted throughout North Vietnam at the present time."

Before Laird spoke to reporters, North Vietnam claimed U.S. planes had dropped mines in Haiphong harbor and rocketed suburbs of North Vietnam's chief port.

The United States never did remove minefields from the approaches to seven North Vietnamese harbors, including Haiphong.

Nixon ordered bombing of North Vietnam cut back to the 20th parallel in late October in an apparent gesture aimed at bringing the peace negotiations to a satisfactory conclusion.

His action at the time, in effect spared the most populous area of North Vietnam, including Hanoi and Haiphong, while permitting the U.S. planes to continue attacking North Vietnamese supply movements throughout the less populated North Vietnamese area above South Vietnam.

Laird briefly acknowledged the lifting of bombing restrictions on North Vietnam two days after Henry Kissinger, chief U.S. peace negotiator and President Nixon's security adviser, had reported negotiations toward a ceasefire were at an impasse.

Kissinger blamed the North Vietnamese for coming up with what he called "frivolous" proposals and changing their position on issues he felt had been resolved.

Renewal of the air war on Haiphong and Hanoi in an attempt to force North Vietnam to accept U.S. peace terms had been predicted after Kissinger's announcement Saturday that his negotiations with Hanoi's Le Duc Tho had broken down.

A statement from the North Vietnamese foreign minister said that, on Sunday, "the U.S. imperialists had several aircraft operating in the area of Long Chau island, Cat Be Island and the suburbs of Haiphong to mine the territorial waters of the Nam Trieu estuary and to fire rockets at a number of positions in the suburbs of Haiphong."

The statement also charged that, on Sunday, many U.S. planes and warships "savagely bombarded" numerous population centres in the southern third of North Vietnam below the 20th parallel.

AMIN GRABS ESTATES

KAMPALA, Uganda (CP) — Eight foreign concerns, most of them British-owned, and all foreign tea estates were taken over today in President Idi Amin's latest move to end foreign influence in his East African country.

The British foreign office said Amin's action is "wholly unjustified and compensation would be demanded."

Barrett Slams Davis

Premier Dave Barrett today angrily attacked federal Environment Minister Jack Davis for letter-to-the-editor Davis wrote to a Vancouver newspaper in connection with federal-provincial discussions on a coal port at Squamish.

Barrett accused Davis of playing "cheap politics" on the issue and said he would never talk to Davis privately again, but only in the presence of reporters.

Barrett called Davis "persona non grata" in any negotiations affecting B.C. and said Davis' statements in the letter to the Vancouver Sun have "put in jeopardy" talks coming up later this week between B.C. and Ottawa on an alternative route to ship Prairie wheat through the Fraser Valley.

Davis, in his letter, comments on a Sun editorial on the Squamish issue. He says Barrett is "all for" the coal port at Squamish and then states his own personal opposition to it.

Barrett vehemently denied he supports the coal port at Squamish, saying he has asked for environmental studies to be made to determine if it is ecologically safe to establish a coal port there. The study is underway now with a report expected shortly.

Davis says in his letter that he favors locating a coal port at Prince Rupert. But Barrett said his government is looking at "a number of alternatives" and is not committed to any single area as a location.

Barrett is scheduled to meet later this week with federal transport minister Jean Marchand and minister of regional economic expansion Don Jamieson.

"Those talks are now in jeopardy as a result of what Mr. Davis said," Barrett said. "If Davis is going to be this childish and if this is the way they are going to be, well they can just forget it."

The iguana was part of a multi-faceted display designed to introduce the youngsters to the opportunities available at the university. Among the other attractions were glass blowing, print making and a helium experiment. (See pictures and story page 33.)

HANOI WANTS US, SAYS SHARP

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Sunday that Hanoi as well as Washington wants Canada to serve on a supervisory force in Vietnam if a ceasefire is achieved.

"We've had direct word from Hanoi that they would like Canada to be a member of the supervisory commission," he told a CBC television interviewer.

"They positively want us. They rely on our objectivity."

But the size and role of the proposed four-country commission has emerged as a major barrier to a Washington-Hanoi ceasefire agreement.

Retired Canadian diplomat and ambassador, Chester Ronning, said Sunday that Canada has a duty to take part in a supervisory peace commission in Vietnam.

Meanwhile, Canada and South Vietnam signed a $1 million agreement today for a Canadian-sponsored public health program in South Vietnam's Mekong Delta.

Task Force To Study B.C. Jails

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

A task force established today by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald has been asked to come up with new ways to handle lawbreakers, with special emphasis on drug-associated crime.

At a press conference this morning, Macdonald said the province's correctional services are "bombed out" by cases linked to drug addiction.

The first term of reference for the three-man task force is to examine prison and other detention and treatment institutions and come up with some new kinds of facilities.

Members of the task force are Dr. M. A. Matheson, deputy director of corrections for the province; John Macdonald, of University of British Columbia's social work department, and D. J. Schultz, deputy warden of the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre.

The group has been asked to seek information from outside the province, especially from Ontario and the federal government, and from Chief Judge Lawrence Brahan of B.C.

The force has been asked specifically to look at detention, remand and correctional facilities for juvenile and adult offenders, both men and women.

The task force will also be asked to make a recommendation on which is the appropriate department for corrections to fall under.

Macdonald said he wants a "blueprint" for future development of correctional services, "with special attention to drug dependency, alcoholism and sex offenders and other individuals needing drug forensic clinic services."

"Quite frankly, right now we're bombed out with people related to drug offences in our correctional institutions," Macdonald said.

He said he wants the force to bring in a report "quite quickly." The aim is not "exhaustive, original research. We want them to assemble the known facts about corrections so that we can take

'It's Merely A Super Sensorium'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Maurice Egan, the city's social planning director, has prepared a report for city council on a recently opened store which specializes in books and materials relating to sex and love.

Eagan inspected the premises of Ultra Love Products after the city received complaints from some residents and merchants.

He prepared this report, which he says he will present to city council Tuesday:

"The Ultra Love Products emporium
"Is merely a super sensorium
"It's unintellectual, and maybe bisexual,
"But hardly a pornographorium."

COFFEE-HEART LINK

LONDON (Reuter) — Coffee-drinking appears more closely associated with heart attacks than cigarette smoking, says a report in the latest issue of one of Britain's most authoritative medical magazines, the Lancet.

A report by a team of American researchers from the Boston collaborative drug surveillance program says people who drink more than five cups of coffee a day run twice the risk of having a heart attack as people who drink no coffee at all.

The report says coffee appears more strongly associated with heart attacks than cigarette smoking.

Heart patients used in the survey were admitted to hospitals in the United States, Canada, Israel and New Zealand.

The report says coffee-drinking might just be a feature of the "striving competitive" people believed by some medical researchers to be prone to heart attacks.

Whatever the danger in coffee, says the report, it is not caffeine.

Caffeine is also present in tea and the report shows that people who drink a lot of tea may have a slightly reduced chance of heart attacks.

Report Offers Postmen 65 Cents; Job Security

OTTAWA (CP) — Wage increases of 65 cents an hour over a contract lasting until Dec. 31, 1974, are recommended for postal workers by the majority report of a conciliation board dealing with the contract dispute between postmen and the government.

The report, released today, is signed by chairman Owen Shime and union nominee William Walsh of the three-man conciliation board.

A minority report, prepared by government nominee Bruce Stewart, suggests wage increases that would amount to raises of about 10 cents an hour less than those in the majority study.

The majority report notes that the government has agreed to reconfirm a guarantee of no layoffs for employees in the bargaining unit which was first made in September, 1970.

The wage recommendations would raise the maximum wages for letter carriers to $4.19 an hour, 15 months after ratification of the contract. Postal clerks' wages would reach a maximum of $4.34 an hour.

The majority recommendations are closer to the union's wage position which originally asked for a 66-cent-an-hour wage boost in a 15-month contract.

The report also suggests retroactive pay dating back to the expiry date of the previous contract of $400, or 25 cents an hour in pay.

In his minority report, Stewart says the public is paying a high price for their postal services.

He said postal workers bring no skills to their job and little on-the-job training is needed except for some highly skilled workers.

The report is "the stupidest thing I've ever heard of," Guy Morissette, president of the Montreal letter carriers' union.

"We will definitely propose that Montreal area workers reject the report," he said in an interview. "If it's taken seriously there will be a strike for sure."

The Devil Exists, Says Pope

New York Times

ROME (AP) — A two-page special section on the Devil in Sunday's issue of the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano was interpreted as a reflection of Pope Paul VI's deepening concern over demonic aspects in the present-day world.

Churchmen here said that the 14 columns that the Vatican organ devoted to Satan represented also a counter-offensive by conservatives against liberal theologians — in the Netherlands and elsewhere — who tended to dilute traditional Roman Catholic teachings about the Devil.

Some priests and members of the laity in Rome were heard Sunday to express puzzlement in private over the Vatican's emphasis on demonology just before Christmas. The commemoration of the birth of Jesus customarily stresses salvation and the message of the angels, Peace on Earth.

The special section of L'Osservatore Romano had been set in type two weeks ago, but publication was postponed several times because other material was accorded priority by the editors of the Vatican daily.

Speaking about Satan, the Pontiff cited Biblical passages referring to him, and continued: "We thus know that this obscure and disturbing being really exists and that he still operates with treacherous cunning; he is the occult enemy who sows errors and disgrace in human history."

The Pope described the Devil as the "perfidious and astute charmer who manages to insinuate himself into us by way of the senses, of fantasy, of concupiscence, of Utopian logic, of disorderly social contacts."

Demonology, Pope Paul said, was "a very important chapter of Catholic doctrine that ought to be studied again, although this is not being done much today."

The last remark was widely understood as a deploration of a tendency among modern theologians, particularly liberals, to speak generically of evil in the world rather than specifically on a personified devil.

SKYLAB AWAITS 3 ASTRONAUTS

ABOARD TICONDEROGA (AP) — The work of the three Apollo 17 astronauts won't end when they board this recovery ship on splashdown Tuesday. They'll immediately begin tests to aid America's next space venture — Skylab.

Instead of going straight to the Ticonderoga's hospital when a helicopter brings them aboard, Eugene Cernan, Harrison Schmitt and Ronald Evans will enter a new facility called a Skylab Mobile Laboratory.

Mel Richmond, Apollo 17 deputy recovery team leader, said the SML has everything the doctors and technicians will need to examine astronauts for the effects of the moon flight.

The astronauts were on course for a splashdown in the South Pacific at 11:24 a.m. Victoria time Tuesday. Their ship America was operating perfectly.

The astronauts, on their last full day in space and after a night's rest, had to stow equipment, review checklists and clean up the command ship.

The spacemen also had to secure their record cargo of moon rocks, three canisters of film and other science treasures gathered during the 13-day mission to the moon.

In the last major exploit of the mission, Evans made a 44-minute walk in deep space Sunday to retrieve film canisters from a part of the ship which won't return to earth and bring them to the safety of America's cabin.

Educational TV May Be Choice Of Legislature

Chairman Hugh Curtis of the legislative committee on broadcast coverage expects educational TV will play a prominent role in any system of filming B.C. legislative debates.

The Saanich mayor and Conservative MLA returned at the weekend from a two-week tour with members of his committee looking into broadcast coverage in other provinces and at the United Nations general assembly.

In Ontario the committee was impressed with "the value of TV as an educator," Curtis said. He and the other three MLAs appointed by Speaker Gordon Dowding to report findings and recommendations, spent considerable time with the Ontario Educational Communications Authority.

This system used CBC facilities to make material available to television stations throughout the provice, and operates with a staff of 350.

"We see that application here," Curtis said in an interview Sunday. But there are no conclusions as yet on the manner in which ETV will be connected with the legislature. This could be done privately, through the CBC or another government agency, or by a combination of these.

Curtis said the committee will have several choices and alternatives to present when it reports to Dowding, who asked for a submission by Jan. 15.

On tour with Curtis were Phyllis Young (NDP — Little Mountain), Robert McClelland (SC — Langley) and Graham Lea (NDP — Prince Rupert), all freshman MLAs. They were accompanied by chief of Hansard Maurice Chazottes.

However, the committee has not yet met the legislative press gallery of B.C. and will hear submissions of a general nature from press and public in two days of hearings set for Jan. 9 and 10 in Vancouver.

Curtis said an extension may be necessary, but in any case a report would be made soon after the hearings in Vancouver.

A recurring division of opinion was found everywhere except the UN on whether there ought to be TV and filming of proceedings in the assemblies.

Curtis said it was generally found that legislatures and other assemblies were designed with only limited facilities for the public and press coverage, and he observed that the B.C. chamber was smaller than all those visited.

"In these legislatures, where the press gallery is accepted, there is the definite possibility that TV would be an intrusion," Curtis observed.

(In the B.C. chamber, the press gallery was designed with a limited number of newspaper reporters in mind. There is no provision for radio and television broadcasters.)

The only exception to the space finding is the UN general assembly, which was designed for unobtrusive filming, radio broadcasting and newspaper reporters.

The committee had "an intensely interesting and hectic time," Curtis said. "We were well received wherever we went and learned a great deal at each stop, particularly at the UN where we were given the run of the general assembly, press and TV facilities."

The four MLAs, although representing three political parties, "learned that travel together can be rewarding."

They spent three days in New York and all but Curtis were another three days in Halifax while Curtis attended to a personal matter in Montreal.

Most of the time was spent in Toronto and was "top of the list" for information gained from city hall, metro Toronto, the Toronto Board of Education and Ontario Educational Communications Authority.

At the Ontario legislature they met the Ontario commission on the legislature which included Dalton Camp, Douglas Fisher and Farquhar Oliver.

The use of television in the Ontario legislature goes back a number of years and includes filming of the entire legislative question period.

The final stop was Edmonton, where the Alberta legislature has recently introduced filming. A discussion was held with Speaker Gerard Amerongen.

CUSTOMER BURNED

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — A service station attendant, angry because a customer complained about an inoperative vending machine, doused the man with gasoline from a pump Sunday and set him afire with a cigarette lighter.

Joseph Adams, 27, was in critical condition today with second and third-degree burns over 60 per cent of his body. Pickney Steen, 45, was charged with assault to murder and held under $45,000 bond.

Welfare Folk Hand Back Shovels

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The chairman of the city's social services committee says more than 80 welfare recipients refused an opportunity to make $3.40 an hour during the weekend by shovelling snow.

Ald. Grant Timmins said 13 of the recipients showed up when they were called Friday night to help clear snow from city bus stops, but all refused to work when they were handed a shovel.

Ald. Timmins also said that only 55 or 60 of the city's 300 public works employees turned up when they were asked to work overtime to clear snow.

He said he would discuss "the whole matter" with the city welfare administrator and other members of his committee.

U.S. Census Bureau Cuts Nation's Growth Figures

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A declining birth rate and the desire of women to have fewer children in the years ahead have caused the Census Bureau to reduce sharply its estimates of future population growth in the United States.

By the year 2000, for example, there will be 20 million fewer people than had been forecast on the basis of previous statistics.

The reduction could have major implications for North American society in areas ranging from the amount of school construction to the funding of social security benefits to support an older population.

It reflects changes in births and child-planning which now suggest that the United States may eventually reach zero population growth, the point at which births precisely equal deaths.

The fertility level, based on the actual number of babies being born, has dropped dramatically in recent years to a current annual rate of 2,040 children per 1,000 women.

At the height of the post-war baby boom in 1957, the fertility rate was at 3,770 children per 1,000 women.

A formal change in census projections can itself have significant effect because many planners in public and private life rely on them.

One of their chief interests is in the age composition of the population. The latest projections point to a population that is substantially older than the current one.

For example, about 53 per cent of the population this year is under 30 years of age. But if the current birth rate is maintained, only 44 per cent of the population will be under 30 by the year 2000.

The median age now is 28.1 years. By the year 2000, it will have risen to 34 years if the present trend continues.

To accommodate for that kind of change, school planners would be expected to build fewer schools. College enrollments may drop. There would be fewer and fewer teaching jobs available.

The past few years already have witnessed a substantial increase in the number of women seeking jobs. If the birth rate holds steady or drops even further, more women will be free to enter the job market.

Demographers also believe that one major result of a lower birth rate will be the demise of many small rural communities. About 1,300 rural counties lost population during the 1960s and more will lose in the years ahead. The country will become more metropolitan — specifically, more suburban.

The economic results of a slower population growth are in dispute. Some business groups believe an older population, growing at a slow rate, would lose its economic vitality.

Precisely the reverse was predicted by the report of the commission on population growth and the American future.

It is estimated that by the year 2000, per-capita income would be 15 per cent higher if the population were growing at a two-children-per-family rate instead of a three-child rate.

The principal explanation is that income would rise if a larger proportion of the population is older and in the labor force. With fewer children at home, and more women working, the commission said, the result would be "more workers and earners" and relatively fewer mouths to feed."

This tendency would reduce poverty in the United States but would not eliminate it, the commission said.

THE BRIDE HITCH-HIKED

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — The bride hitch-hiked to her wedding.

The Chatham couple braved Saturday's snowstorm for their marriage in Windsor.

Theresa Sojcznski of Chatham was in the last of several cars heading west for Windsor when it became stuck in snow.

The groom, John Duric, was in the lead car. He arrived in Windsor, thinking his bride was just a little way behind.

She wasn't. When her car became stuck the bride in her ivory-colored wedding dress, and a relative riding with her began to hitch-hike.

An unidentified driver picked them up, drove them to Windsor, then stayed for the wedding.

"When you see a bride on the highway, you know something has got to be wrong," he told the wedding party.

steps in the fairly reasonable future."

This could possibly be early in the new year, Macdonald said.

The attorney-general said he prefers to regard drug offences as a health problem, and "perhaps" there could be specialized facilities for people addicted to narcotics, and alcohol.

If some special way of handling these problems was produced "we would relieve the congestion in our institutions enormously," Macdonald said. He said that not counting remand cases, drug offenders make up about half of the numbers in correctional facilities.

The task force will not be examining federal correctional facilities, Macdonald said.

Other points in the terms of reference:

"To make, as may be deemed necessary, arrangements with the Consultation Centre of the Department of the Solicitor General for consultative services in specialized areas."

"To examine the facilities available for children under 17 years of age who have been transferred to Adult Court and are serving sentences."

Macdonald said he is very concerned about the raising of juveniles to adult courts simply because there is no other way to deal with them.

Dissident Free to Go

Washington Post

MOSCOW — Zhores Medvedev, a dissident Soviet biologist and author once held involuntarily in a Soviet mental hospital, has received permission to spend a year in England, according to the British embassy here.

An embassy spokesman said Medvedev plans to work next year at the national institute for medical research in London. He, his wife and 16-year-old son all have Soviet exit visas, the spokesman said. All have applied for British visas.

Medvedev has an international reputation as a specialist on aging of cells, and as an author of books and articles on civil rights in the Soviet Union.

Medvedev's twin brother Roy is a historian.

Hos book on the Stalin years, which included new material on the terror of that period, was recently published in the West.

The only precedent for allowing someone like Medvedev to leave the Soviet Union is the case of Valeri Chalidze, another dissident and a physicist.

Soviet officials in New York last week confiscated Chalidze's Soviet passport and announced that he had lost his citizenship.

DRUNK AS DOGS

CORDOBA, Argentina (UPI) — Wine ran in the gutters and the neighborhood dogs who lapped it up were so drunk they couldn't walk straight.

The canine binge began at 4:30 a.m. Sunday when the brakes failed on a truck carrying 30,000 bottles of Argentine wine. The truck smashed into a wall by the railway tracks. The driver escaped with light injuries — then the dogs went to town.

Arrows show the Post Office's February 'bonus'

PRINTER WILL PAY FOR EXTRA DAYS

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Post Office spokesman said Sunday that a Montreal printer will be footing the bill for reprinting of thousands of faulty 1973 calendars the Post Office had planned to mail to homes across Canada.

Les Saul said the calendars, some of which listed a February 29, 30, and 31 on the March page, were on the way to major cities before the error was spotted.

He said the printer and an advertising agency, whose names were not available, assumed full responsibility for the error because the shipments were made before the job was approved by Post Office officials.

The 368-day calendars contained information about postal rates, deadlines and the wrapping of packages, and encouraged people to mail early in busy seasons.

Saul said the calendars were to be distributed in early December to avoid the Christmas rush and were dated December 1972 through December 1973.

The error was discovered two weeks ago and Saul said the Montreal printer promised to reprint the calendars without charge.

Saul said he didn't know what the printer's representative in Vancouver did with calendars already delivered here. There were reports the faulty calendars were sent to a recycling company in nearby Burnaby.

A spokesman for the Postal Workers' Union, who did not want to be identified, said there were about 170,000 calendars in Vancouver, 200,000 in Toronto and Montreal and smaller quantities in other centres.

CUPE Officials Picket

Two senior officials of the Canadian Union of Public Employees joined the CUPE Local 1311 picket line at Sandringham Private Hospital today.

They were J. F. (Lofty) MacMillan, director of organization for the union, and his assistant, Pasquale Ingenito.

Both men were in Victoria for a weekend meeting of B.C. staff representatives of CUPE to discuss a number of matters, including the 26-month strike at Sandringham for a first contract.

Planning strategy for continuation of the strike, despite recent failure of negotiations to produce a settlement, was the first item on the agenda of the meeting.

MacMillan said private hospitals should be taken over by the government to remove the profit motive from care of the elderly. He said Sandringham should be paid the real value of the institution, plus one dollar as profit.

He also said the CUPE demands "that any settlement must require the scabs to get out of the hospital and that the strikers be reinstated."

Returning to work of 24 strikers and displacement of that number of people who have taken their jobs was the stumbling block in recent negotiations.

Shopping 'Orgy'

Times News Services

LONDON — Unprecedented spending by Christmas shoppers is reported in department stores here and in other United Kingdom cities and towns.

Apparently spurred by the price freeze imposed Nov. 6 to check soaring inflation, shoppers were reported to be engaging in an "orgy of spending."

A newspaper survey showed Christmas sales were running about 25 per cent higher than last year, with shoppers stocking up on television sets, refrigerators and other expensive items in anticipation of price increases when the freeze ends.

"There is an enormous amount of spending going on," said Robert Midgley, manager of London's Harrods department store. "We have never seen anything quite like it."

KISSINGER REPORT:

Vietnam Impasse 'Fundamental'

By MURREY MARDER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The United States and North Vietnam are locked in a "fundamental" impasse over whether they are negotiating an "armistice" or "peace," Henry Kissinger r u e f ully acknowledged Saturday.

None of the hopeful, counter-balancing statements by the weary presidential envoy at his second extraordinary press conference in seven weeks could overcome the basic discord which he revealed.

"We have an agreement that is 99 per cent completed as far as the text of the agreement is concerned" and "we are one decision away from a settlement," said Kissinger.

He, however, admitted, "But that alone is not the problem," because "the technical implementing instruments that they (North Vietnam) have presented" to bring the agreement into force "are totally unacceptable . . ."

The barrier on which the negotiations have foundered, Kissinger indirectly acknowledged, is in fact the central issue in the war: Whether there is one Vietnam or two.

Kissinger virtually conceded that when he said, "He wanted some reference in the agreement, however indirect, which would make clear that the two parts of Vietnam would live in peace with each other and that neither side would impose its solution on the other by force."

The president's national security adviser, speaking in circuitous language because of his agreement with North Vietnam's Le Duc Tho not to discuss "the substance of the talks," said at another point, "We cannot accept the proposition that North Vietnam has a right of constant intervention in the south."

What Kissinger evidently was referring to there was what North Vietnam's position would be if the "peace settlement" is breached by South Vietnam.

Kissinger did not say what the U.S. position would be if the agreement is breached on the Communist side, although President Nixon reportedly has given assurances to the Saigon government that U.S. air power could support the agreement.

On Oct. 26 at the White House, when Kissinger buoyantly proclaimed on behalf of Nixon that "we believe peace is at hand," he spoke glowingly of moving "from hostility to normalcy."

North Vietnam, he said, had "dropped" or cut back various demands that would open the road to "peace."

But many experts concluded from studying the terms of the nine-point agreement — which are still available in summary form — that they added up to a ceasefire accord, not peace.

These terms were ambiguous enough to produce a continuing military-political struggle in South Vietnam after a ceasefire.

Experts, including the administration's own specialists, privately agreed that the agreement was certain to be breached; the only question was how grossly it would be violated.

What now appears to have occurred is that the United States, at least partially at the insistence of South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu, attempted to convert an ambiguous agreement into a hard and fast peace settlement that would assure the existence of a separate South Vietnamese nation.

As Kissinger said Saturday:

"I cannot consider it an extremely onerous demand to say that the parties of a peace settlement should live in peace with one another, and we cannot make a settlement which brings peace to North Vietnam and maintains the war in South Vietnam."

North Vietnam evidently has a considerably different view of what it was negotiating.

Last week, Hanoi's most authoritative theoretical journal, Hoc Tap, said, in "revolutionary struggle, there is a time for us to advance, but there is also a time for us to step backward temporarily in order to advance more steadily later."

By "temporarily coming to an agreement with the enemy," the journal bluntly stated, North Vietnam was making a zig-zag in a continuing battle.

North Vietnam's leaders udoubtedly assumed that Washington understood Hanoi's intentions.

Kissinger, at the outset of the Nixon administration, often spoke in private — and the words became public — of the search for "a decent interval" to protect U.S. "honor" between that nation's exit from the war and whatever was to follow afterward.

What always has been in question, however, is whether President Nixon also accepted the "decent interval" concept.

It has been charged, but also denied, that there were variations between the settlement price of the President and his national security adviser; Kissinger always has emphasized, as he did Saturday at the White House, that the test of any negotiating draft accord is whether the President, and he alone, concludes that it is "just."

The whole thrust of Kissinger's presentation Saturday was that North Vietnam has reneged on the "unsettled" portion of the agreement after previously giving its consent.

North Vietnam, however, has been charging that it is the United States which executed a turnabout, "by scheming to revise the basic principles of this agreement" which Hanoi expected would be signed on Oct. 31.

Hanoi's specific charge, echoed by the Viet Cong Saturday, is that the United States has joined Saigon in seeking to perpetuate the division of South Vietnam.

A Hanoi Radio broadcast Saturday, prior to Kissinger's press conference, reiterated that the United States is attempting to "sabotage" the Geneva agreements of 1954 which ended the French Indochina war.

BRIAN TOBIN, Editor — STUART UNDERHILL, Publisher — GORDON BELL, Managing Editor

Due for Debate

The Greater Victoria community has always taken an interest in the University of Victoria and its predecessor, Victoria College. This was particularly evident during the last several years while the Gordon Head institution, like universities all over the world, was rocked by numerous internal forces of criticism — some minor, some major, all arousing off-campus questions and a public desire to know what was going on.

The report of the Commission on Academic Development, chaired by Dr. D. J. MacLaurin, although not designed to delve into the recent student and faculty unrest, takes a strong look at the "basic academic purposes and goals of the university." Its criticisms, released last week, are largely implied, but its comments and recommendations provide answers to many of the questions which people "downtown" have been asking.

The Commission recognizes that there will be numerous arguments regarding its conclusions. But its research sources have been broad, its judgments appear to be rooted in common sense, and it has produced a report that deserves close study on the campus — as well as off it — and recognition of many of its recommendations as official policy.

Quality is stressed as the major consideration in university education in Victoria, with concentration on the fields in which this area holds natural advantages. The desirability of avoiding too much growth is emphasized, and, while no specific maximum is cited, the present total of 5,000 students, which may prevail for another five years, seems to be approved. Approach to 6,000 apparently should ring the warning bells.

With quality and despite controlled size, the Commission sees the need to make the University's services available to as many persons as possible in the community. Part-time courses, evening lectures and other measures are mentioned as a means of encouraging attendance by mature citizens as well as young students. The report is on sound ground here, for a participating public will understand and support the institution and provide the local backing without which the University will not reach its full stature.

Admission standards should be raised, the report says, and made effective through entrance examinations. The traditional debate as to the role of a university — to train students for jobs or to broaden and enrich their understanding — is not settled by the Commission. The growing preference of students for specialized programs as compared with general programs is seen as a vote for job-oriented education. But it is also noted that many employers today are more interested in the applicant's personality and ability to learn on the job. The report gets around this dilemma by urging a "proper balance" in designing curricula.

There is some straightforward discussion of the role and the success of the faculty in coping with today's educational problems. If standards for students are to be high, the quality of instruction must be high, and the report recommends "an annual review of each instructor's teaching effectiveness." The purposes — as distinct from the content — of each course should be made plain from the outset, and both teachers and students should be judged on their success in achieving these objectives. Known standards should be set on which to base these judgments.

What may strike a welcome note for many "downtown" observers is the comment of the Commission that "in recent years there has been much discussion about the quality of university teaching, and about the ways in which teaching can be evaluated and appropriately rewarded. After considering this problem, the Commission suggests that we should be emphasizing 'learning' rather than 'teaching,' and that the University should be recognized as a place for learning rather than as a place for teaching."

That may take a little digesting on campus, but it could prove to be the basic diet for some significant reforms.

Rebutting the Argument for Deterrent

The first significant rebuttal of the growing argument for restoration of the death penalty for murder in Canada has been presented in a study commissioned by the solicitor-general's department. Authors of the report state they have found no link between the rising number of criminal homicides and the suspension of capital punishment during the five-year trial period scheduled to end this month.

A number of prevailing points of view appear to be refuted.

Retention of the death penalty for killers of policemen (nullified repeatedly during the trial period by commutations to life imprisonment) has not effectively reduced such murders.

No exclusive association was found in the study between the homicide rate and population, urbanization, economic conditions, industrialization, climatic conditions, divorce rates or religion.

The murder rate during the trial period lagged behind the increase in other violent crimes.

This is the kind of information, late though it may be in emerging, which is essential in forming judgments on so important an issue. No doubt the report will be challenged by persons who believe that suspension of the death penalty removed the most effective deterrent to murder.

On the basis of the study, however, they may no longer take it for granted that because the rate went up, the abolition of capital punishment was the main, if not the sole, reason for the increase. Too many diversified elements are disclosed to permit such a simplified black-and-white picture.

WILLIAM R. FRYE

What Is Needed Is a Diplomat

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — Next month, after two years in the international arena, George Bush, United States delegate to the UN, returns to domestic politics. His earlier metier now once again becomes his full-time preoccupation.

This revolving-door representation of the United States in the UN by politically-inclined individuals is not a habit which supporters of the world organization would like to see cultivated. It implies, despite denials, that the UN assignment, in Washington's eyes, is merely a platform from which to obtain domestic exposure for promising political figures, a temporary interlude between more important posts.

Better Suited

No doubt, in Bush's case, the impression is wide of the mark. On hard, objective grounds, his transfer has much to commend it. Congenial and able though he is, he undoubtedly will be better suited to be Chairman of the Republican National Committee than UN ambassador.

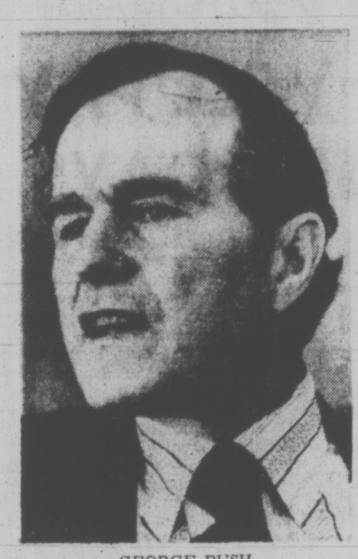
Moreover, Bush did not himself want the revolving door to revolve so fast. He liked the UN job, and almost certainly would have preferred to delay his return to politics.

But however long the stay in the UN's glass cage, if it is a politician who comes to the job and a politicias who leaves it, there remains the uncomfortable suspicion that it was a politician who served in it. What is needed is a diplomat.

To his credit, Bush rarely if ever angled or distorted his UN appearances for their impact on the domestic audience, as Henry Cabot Lodge, for example, sometimes seemed to do. But his acknowledged political ambitions were an inescapable handicap.

When one reaches into the political arena for a UN ambassador, one runs the risk of coming up, either with a pompous nonentity (which Bush certainly is not) of with a handsome, gregarious dilettante (which some critics thought him to be). Hard as he worked, he was never wholly able to overcome this burden.

The job of UN delegate requires a professional career diplomat with extensive experience both in the techniques and the subject matter of UN diplomacy. Few posts in the Foreign Service are so specialized, or so difficult for a newcomer to master.



GEORGE BUSH
. . . out of the door

To be sure, the direct impact of the UN on the United States' national interest is often peripheral, these days. Yet as an institution it remains a channel for informal contact with 131 governments, including notably China, and may at any time be catapulted once again, in a crisis, to a position of great importance.

Opportunities to "strengthen" the UN — that is, to make it a more constructive contribution to the national interest — are few, and depend less on the personality of the American delegate than on the policies of the small-power majority (and of the United States). But a persuasive and imaginative delegate could slow the decline of American influence, and might even be able to reverse it.

There is also some substantive peacemaking that he could, on occasion, undertake. On the Middle East, for example, though much of the meaningful work is done in Washington and in traditional diplomatic channels, the key dramatis personae often gather informally at UN headquarters. Deadlocks can sometimes be loosened or broken by a single imaginative idea.

Lasting Impressions

The UN is also an important educational institution where representatives of emerging nations, and even of more mature governments, gain lasting impressions which subsequently influence policy.

UN delegates have a way of going home and becoming the foreign minister, and they take with them the ideas and prejudices they have obtained here. The United States delegate to the UN is often a major source of these impressions.

It is possible, of course, to marry the profession of politics with the profession of diplomacy, and come up with a happy union. Adlai Stevenson managed it.

But there are few Adlai Stevensons, and it is rare for such cross-fertilization to produce a healthy effect. The man who has temporarily transvested his profession has some of the same handicaps as the one who has temporarily changed his sex.

MAURICE WESTERN

Reviving Election Reform

OTTAWA — The federal government and Parliament have never enjoyed a monopoly in the field of political experimentation and reform; a fact which adds considerable interest to reports of the present week from Toronto and Quebec City.

As Parliament has tended to follow provincial initiatives in many cases—for example, in lowering the voting age or in the employment of independent commissions for purposes of redistribution—it can scarcely be indifferent to the major changes now being implemented by the two most populous provinces.

For Ontario, Premier Davis has promised legislation compelling disclosure of contributions to political parties by public and private corporations or other institutions. Nominal contributions by individuals will apparently be excluded.

In Quebec an all-party committee of the legislature is expected to report shortly, recommending among other changes a permanent voters' list.

Persuasive Case

There is a persuasive case for both reforms. But they have in common one characteristic which may not appeal to general taxpayers. Each will have to be paid for out of the public purse.

The prime minister discussed the problems of a permanent list on a question and answer program in Winnipeg towards the end of the election campaign. His comments were as follows:

"It's easier in a country which only has a unitary form of government or in a province which has only one election law applying to provincial legislation. When you have a country with ten provinces and federal elections, to have electoral lists you would first of all have to have some kind of constitutional agreement that they all decide to have the same voting age and the same regulations for getting on voting lists and so on.

"But more important still, if it's going to be efficient, you would have to be updating these lists continually — I think the figures were something like $15 million a year that it would cost. And the other difficulty is that it also calls for a type of control of people, which eventually involves identity cards and taking oaths constantly to prove that you are the person who has moved and who said that he used to live there and so on . . ."

The case for disclosure has been simply put by Premier Davis. In his view, reshaped apparently by the Fidinam affair, the public requires assurance that political contributions involving significant sums are not related to favors from government.

Parliament already has a report on this subject submitted, in 1966, by the committee on election expenses. It recognized that some objections to disclosure had merit but favored it nevertheless and for a variety of reasons.

PREMIER DAVIS
. . . promised legislation

Disclosure, the committee argued, would have "a cleansing effect on politics" and "would work indirectly to reduce campaign expenditures." It would also "reduce the mystery surrounding political influence, and "perhaps elevate the image of political parties and politicians."

The committee seems to have been in no doubt, however, that such a reform would tend to dry up present sources of campaign funds. It proposed, incidentally, to go somewhat beyond the proposed Ontario disclosure requirements since a candidate, following an election, would be required to submit a report to a Registrar of Election and Political Finance showing the full name and address of each donor, the amount of each contribution, a list of all donated goods and services and even "money or value promised but not received."

The solution suggested was, in substance, that the general public should come to the financial aid of the political parties, as it does now in Quebec. Included in the report was an estimate of the cost of reimbursing candidates in the first elections under the new rules in that province. This was slightly less than $2 million.

Comment at that time and since leaves little doubt that the committee's solution has great appeal for the political parties. It may have similar appeal in Toronto. In making his announcement about disclosure, Mr. Davis also said that a legislative commission would examine the whole question of the reform of party financing in Ontario.

Less Apparent

It is much less apparent that voter-financing will have equal appeal for the general public. If political parties were in fact regarded with the affection which they consider their due, there would not be a financing problem.

Some effort is evidently required to induce the average voter to support one political party. Reform will oblige him to support four including, in many cases, at least three which he regards without enthusiasm and perhaps even detestation. It might conceivably in future require him to subsidize others with even less claim to his confidence.

Thus there is bound to be, in all the parties, some nagging uncertainty about the probable response of voters to parliamentary good works. On past performance it is unlikely, however, to be very inhibiting. The shape of federal things to come is, in all probability, indicated by the reformist efforts now begun or well under way in Toronto and Quebec City. With the two largest parties in the two largest provinces committed to these very large changes in political practices there is almost bound to be a revival of interest in Ottawa at least in the subject of election expenses.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Prepared to Bleed

Judge Haig-Brown called John Young an educational genius. This man's own colleagues outside Campbell River have said little. I see this as another part of the residual "teacher weakness" in British Columbia. Of course, the real fact is that a school teacher is not a professional and most of us avoid coming to grips with the issue because it portends pain.

Be this as it may, we will never reach professional status in our occupation until we are prepared to stand up "to be counted" in the John Young fashion — "Viva John Young". Here is a man prepared to "bleed all over the sidewalk" for matters of principle.

My support and admiration for John Young grow daily. I wrote on October 17, 1972, my conviction at that time as follows:

"I wish at this time to express strong personal support for John Young, Principal of Campbell River Senior Secondary School.

This educator has brought a strength and vigor to the educational milieu (public school) unprecedented in B.C. history. I have taught in this province for forty-two years and have experienced many of the same frustrations as John Young and thousands of others. Mr. Young has had the courage of his convictions and has indeed given those of us who have spoken out a form of leadership that is nothing short of great. He has done many of the things that our own professional organization should have done years ago. For example, following the publishing of the Chant Commission report, we should have then stood up to the government and Department of Education but we didn't.

The teacher morale continued to deteriorate and teacher mood festered. What finally occurred in the late 60's and early 70's were natural results. But in my mind, the "John Young" approach to bureaucracy and false premises, upon which so much of our structure has continued to function, did more to hasten the teacher "revolt" than any other single factor.

There will no doubt be thousands who are better off on the educational scene because of John Young even though many of them will go to considerable lengths to hide the fact.

Paramount however are such indicators as support of his own staff, hupdreds of students and parents and many professors in the universities."
Horace R. Dawson, Principal, S. J. Willis Junior Secondary School.

Pensions

Your "Pension Boost for Christmas" (December 13, page 1) should read: "The cheques are going to people over age 65 (who qualify already for federal and provincial supplements)".

Omission of the bracketed words may give the false impression that all British Columbians of 65-plus receive a pension boost which is not the case.

People who provided for their old age will continue to receive only the basic $82.88 from the federal government and pay income tax, both provincially and federally. An over-all pension increase from $82.88 to $95.00 would be far more equitable. Perhaps the time has come, too, to make life insurance mandatory for all those who work and who do not contribute to any pension fund.

People are compelled to insure their automobiles. Many insure their homes and their belongings against theft and fire. Why not insure their life? This protection would shield also the widows and the orphans. It would provide retired persons with at least the means of existence and would also protect their dignity and peace of mind.

We should feel compassion for all those who could not provide for their old-age because of physical or mental illness, or previous misfortunes beyond the ability of the individual to overcome. Those unfortunates are the only ones who really deserve help, even more than what they receive at present.—A Taxpayer.

Jeans

Who is this "Bob Hunter" of The Sun who is allowed into the Bengal Room in jeans? A perfect example of "It's not what you know, but who you know" that opens doors. It also seems to me to be a subtle insult to the office of Premier to attend an interview there in jeans, which he says he did in his article in the Times December 12. (Page 5) I wonder where "Bob Hunter" comes from, where jeans are considered business clothes? M. E. Andrew, Sidney, B.C.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of Dec. 18, 1912:

Los Angeles — Fragments of the hydro-aeroplane and clothing which were washed ashore and promptly identified yesterday proved that Horace Kearney, the aviator, and Chester Lawrence, his reporter companion, met disaster soon after they started on their proposed flight over the ocean to San Francisco. Judging from the position of the wreckage which gave the first clue to their fate, they died a short distance from shore, and in all probability their bodies now rest in the tangled morass of the kelp beds near Redondo Beach.

In Computer War There's No Moralizing

By MICHAEL GETLER
The Washington Post

TANSON NHUT AIR BASE, South Vietnam — In the basement of this sprawling U.S. military headquarters just outside Saigon, a dozen U.S. Air Force officers seated behind consoles preside over the world's first computerized air war.

It's the computers, located a few miles from here, that really run much of this bombing campaign, the most intensive in history.

What has been happening in the skies over North Vietnam for the past eight months is vastly different from the air war carried out against the North between 1964 and 1968.

In those earlier years, waves of American F-105 "Thud" fighter-bombers would take off from bases in Thailand and weave in and around the valleys of what came to be known as "Thud Ridge," a long stretch of small mountain peaks that seemed to point "like a long bony finger" right into what ex-pilot Jack Broughton has described as "the modern fighter pilot's private corner of hell — the fierce defences and the targets of downtown Hanoi."

Living by Wits

Much of the time over the north, the F-105 pilots were on their own, living by their wits. Many did not come back.

Though the numbers are in dispute, Air Force officers say some 40 to 50 U.S. fighter-bombers were lost trying to knock down a single target, the Than Hoa bridge 85 miles south of Hanoi. The bridge was never knocked out until the new laser-guided "smart bombs" were used against it in 1972—with no casualties.

Those earlier raid, says one officer, were a testimonial not to Air Force determination "but to our appalling target planning. That bridge just wasn't worth it militarily. There was a place where they (the North Vietnamese) could have forded the river anyway just a few miles away."

Since the North Vietnamese offensive last April reopened heavy U.S. bombing of the north, the American fondness for technology and for every conceivable type of support aircraft to protect the bombers has brought the air war up to date.

"It's all computer run now," explains Seventh Air Force chief, Gen. John W. Vogt Jr. "To get all those planes, all this support, in the right place at precisely the right time you need a better brain than man's."

An Air Force F-4 pilot from Takhli airbase in Thailand puts it more simply: "We just got our s—t together now."

A typical air force mission against four bridges and marshalling yards along the vital northeast railroad from China involves as many as 130 planes from all seven bases in Thailand. Only about 40 of those planes carry bombs.

Sixteen F-4 Phantom fighter-bombers, flying in groups of four and each carrying two 2,000-pound laser-guided smart bombs, would hit the bridges. Another six flights of four fighter-bombers each would hit the rail yards, using conventional 500-pound bombs.

Each four-plane group is escorted in and out by other F-4 protective fighters, and high above the bombers and their escorts fly more F-4s to provide both groups with a second defensive screen against enemy MiG fighters.

Just before the attack planes go in, EB-66 electronic warfare jamming planes — also on cue from the computer — try and jam the radars of SAM missile sites. Cruising nearby are F-105 "Wild Weasal" planes carrying radar-seeking missiles, and still more F-4s carrying hundreds of small cluster bombs designed to wipe out the actual SAM site and the people running it.

Most of this entire force needs to be refueled on the way in and out. Some 90 tankers a day take off from the base at Utapao in Thailand, and even from Bangkok's commercial airfield, with the computer telling them where to go, at what time and with how much fuel. There are extra tankers in the air in case a MiG dogfight runs the escorts low on fuel.

Just before the raids, high-flying S-17 reconnaissance planes from Okinawa take pictures of the areas to be hit, or, if the weather is bad, low flying pilotless photo drones are dropped from the wings of C-130 aircraft based at Danang in South Vietnam to try to fly in below the clouds.

Guided by Radar

Other four-engine EC-135 jets from Thailand do airborne electronic eavesdropping in search of the hard to spot radars that guide North Vietnamese MiGs to the U.S. formations.

"It's all timed to get the fighter-bombers through with minimum losses," says Gen. Vogt.

At the same time, Navy bombers and support planes from four or five carriers off the coast are hitting other targets. As many as 100 B-52s a day from Guam and Utapao are also unloading hundreds of tons of bombs north and south of the demilitarized zone. Many of the heavy bombers, flying 5,200-mile round-trips from Guam, are met by additional refueling tankers from Okinawa and Thailand.

From Nakhon Phanon airbase in Thailand along the Laotian border, helicopters and fighter escorts are in the air to try to rescue downed airmen.

Since April, some 600 American warplanes have been bombing or flying in support of attack planes throughout Vietnam every day, with the number of sorties divided roughly evenly between North and South Vietnam.

From a purely tactical standpoint, the electronic and computer air war against the North appears to have scored some successes.

The development of the laser-guided smart bombs, in the view of virtually all military and civilian specialists, are among the technical "heroes" of the war, permitting much more precise bombing in the North with fewer bombs and fewer attack aircraft.

Some 85 per cent of the bombs used by the Air Force in the North since this spring are laser types. Senior officers claim that they are always used near populated areas, and that about 85 per cent within 15 feet of their target. The North Vietnamese have attempted to "fool" these bombs by using smoke pots to obscure the target, mirrors to bend the laser light beam and even hanging ribbons on bridges to alter the contrast. These measures have not worked, the military claims.

(The U.S. and South Vietnamese air forces both use metal-fragmenting cluster bombs as anti-personnel weapons, other kinds of rockets which fire thousands of tiny metal darts or flechettes, and a new exploding-gas cluster bomb designed to knock out troops in deep bunkers through creation of very high pressure, but Gen. Vogt, in an interview, categorically denied any use of so-called plastic pellet bombs against the North and said no such weapon is in the inventory.

3,000 Airmen Dead

(Both Radio Hanoi and a British physician working in Hanoi had claimed evidence in May of the use of such plastic devices, which don't show up on x-rays of wounds and thus can be even more lethal than other weapons.)

As of September, 1972, eight years of air warfare had taken the lives of 2,985 pilots, air crewmen and non-crew air personnel. Most of the more than 430 prisoners of war in North Vietnam are airmen, as are many of the more than 1,240 listed as missing.

As of Nov. 28, 1,056 American planes have been shot down over North Vietnam since 1965, according to Pentagon figures. Another 464 were lost to hostile action over South Vietnam and 94 went down in Laos. Another 238 crashed or were otherwise lost due to non-combat reasons in the South, with 50 more lost in Laos.

In addition, 4,847 helicopters have been lost, slightly more than half of them in non hostile action.

"Flying over the North has always been removed from the war elsewhere," one F-4 pilot explained. "It's still three hours in the cockpit and 20 minutes of stark terror. Morale is pretty good, though, because we know we're hurting them and they're asking us for peace. Our losses are pretty low, too. North Vietnam is just totally outclassed.

"I'm no blood-thirsty killer, though," he added. "I want to go home," a point made almost automatically by scores of pilots in interviews here who felt that criticism of U.S. war policy at home and in the press had scarred their personal integrity.

If there is a touch of "the war lover" here, it is simply impossible to prove.

Pilots said the urge to "get a MiG" also continued to motivate fighter pilots flying over the North, and cited "professional pride" as a factor which kept bombing runs accurate against supply targets throughout Vietnam.

On Guam, where B-52 crews fly 5,200-mile round trips to hit their targets, there is more diversity of opinion. Many believe that their efforts have helped turn the tide. But for many others the 12 hour ride to release 20 or 30 tons of bombs has carried them to the brink of boredom. Many have been in Southeast Asia for four or five one-year tours of duty.

"There is very little concern, from the morality point of view, about what we are doing here," a young major of a B-52 crew says. "I think you will find that many of us don't give a damn about the war any more. We'd all just like to go home. But anyone who finds it insufferable ought to get out of the Air Force."

Lt. Gen. Gerald Johnson, Eighth Air Force commander on Guam, thinks the B-52 airman probably does his job "without too much question about whether he is killing anybody on the ground. I don't think it enters his mind.

"It is an impersonal thing. Nothing like hand-to-hand combat. I think air war has always been this way . . . an impersonal thing."

VIETNAMESE soldiers watch clouds of smoke and dust rise from bombs dropped by U.S. B52s in front of their lines north of Saigon. Raids on strongly-defended Hanoi involve more danger.

Is the Vietnam war going to be recycled?

Reports out of Saigon and Washington give cause for concern that when a peace settlement finally comes, the U.S. withdrawal so long in the diplomatic works will be far less than complete.

These reports suggest that there'll still be an American military presence. It will simply bear another label — civilian.

American civilians already are working as advisers to the South Vietnamese army and air force, as well as in Cambodia and Laos. So the issue seems to be whether their function will be continued and expanded after a cease-fire.

In fact, while both the U.S. and the North Vietnamese were beginning a huge military buildup in advance of a cease-fire, the first team of American technicians landed at the Bien Hoa air base to help reassemble hundreds of aircraft being turned over to South Vietnam.

Pouring into Bien Hoa on big C5A transports were the components of supersonic F5 fighter-bombers originally given Iran, Taiwan and South Korea, only to be taken back because the F5 is in short supply at home.

South Vietnam is also getting C130 cargo planes from U.S. Air National Guard and air force reserve units. With them are coming civilian technicians under contract to the defence department.

At the very least, this is a hurried effort to beef up the South Vietnamese air force before a peace settlement outlaws such deliveries. But there are hints that more is involved.

▣

In Saigon's only English-language newspaper, help-wanted advertisements have been appearing daily for U.S. civilian "armaments technicians." Many name the advertiser as the management services division of Lear Siegler, Inc., which makes aircraft and electronic equipment.

A number of other private companies specializing in supply and maintenance are also operating in Vietnam with experts who are former U.S. officers.

What's significant is that the still-unsigned peace agreement calls for the withdrawal of all U.S. forces from Vietnam within 60 days of a cease-fire, but there's no known provision covering the withdrawal of U.S. civilians.

So there are grounds for wondering if civilian firms might not be employed to carry out military functions for the South Vietnamese as U.S. forces pull out.

That might be President Thieu's price for going along with the draft agreement. If so, Americans will be moving down the same road they took in 1954, when direct U.S. military involvement began. And we now know where that road leads.

Moreover, no one will be fooled by the spectacle of U.S. citizens hired by American companies to operate American weapons in a military sphere from which Americans presumably have been withdrawn. And given the history of deception practised in Indochina by so many for so long, we cannot afford even the slightest appearance of cheating on the truce arrangement now being worked out.

Quick, Cheap and Wasteful

THE NATION
An Editorial

Time was when old-style, double-entry bookkeeping kept the accounting of a business in a laissez-faire economy in satisfactory shape. Costs were entered in one column, income in another, the items in each column were added, and the two totals showed either a profit or a loss.

In a large business the process was much more complicated, but the principle was the same. The accounting was limited to the corporation and that made for relative simplicity.

Current emphasis on ecology has rendered that whole system obsolete by forcing attention on the "social debit," which can turn private profit into public loss. It is not — and can't be any more — a simple question of credits and debits. In effect we are now living in a situation which calls for triple-entry bookkeeping.

A good example of this new perplexity is the quickfood industry. Offhand, this large and growing business would seem to be harmless. People must eat and if they prefer to eat at the rapid tempo of modern life, what's to stop them?

According to a story in the Chicago Sun-Times, two things might inhibit the further growth of the quickfood industry, or even force it to cut back: it squanders natural resources and it squanders energy. Both are matters of concern, and will remain so.

Foods sold at curbside chains, like McDonald, were investigated by Bruce M. Hannon, an engineer at the University of Illinois. He is one of a group at the Center for Advance Computation working with a $300,000 grant from the National Science Foundation, and a grant from the Ford Foundation, on such problems as the energy demands and environmental costs of private car transportation versus mass transit.

He reports that the McDonald chain of 1,750 restaurants uses up the energy equivalent of 12.7 million tons of coal a year, which he says is enough to keep Pittsburgh, Boston, Washington and San Francisco supplied with electric power for the same period. No doubt, McDonald is less greedy than General Motors in energy consumption, but it is not to be dismissed as of no consequence in the nation's energy budget.

McDonald's packaging is also gargantuan. It requires 174 millions pounds of paper a year, which is the sustained yield of 15 square miles of forest. It sounds appalling, like statistics on the paper consumption of newspapers. Hannon worked on McDonald's energy and resource requirements as an example; there is no reason to believe that the situation is different at Burger Chef, Big Boy, Wimpy's, White Castle, Burger King, Dairy Queen and others. "They are a symbol," Hannon says, "of the nationwide waste of material and energy resources."

McDonald's is not hiding its head in the sand. "We're acutely aware of the problem," says a spokesman for the corporation. "We try to use biodegradable products. And we try to minimize the number of bags going out of our restaurants. In the places with seating, we give trays to people who aren't taking their food out." But it seems they can't use recycled paper, because at the present stage of development it imparts an odor to heated food.

The problem, as Hannon says, is nationwide, and quick foods are just one item. Our great skyscrapers are usually over-heated in winter, often over-air-conditioned in summer, and over-illuminated all the time. There is too much slick packaging. Try to buy a couple of hundred paper clips and you receive them in a transparent plastic container cemented to a neat card describing the product in vivid colors. The cost of the packaging must be considerable — and the paper clips, viewed through the plastic, are no more inspiring than are those our forefathers bought in inexpensive little cartons.

The trouble is that waste is now ingrained in the national character. We shall have to abandon our spend-thrift way of life, but it is not going to be easy and, unlike the quick-food business, it will take considerable time.

What Price Honor?

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

It's not so long ago that publicity men were doing their best to convince the Americans that actress Genevieve Bujold deserved to win the Academy Award for her part in Anne of the Thousand Days. She didn't get the Oscar, but it is difficult to believe that Miss Bujold would have coyly declined had Hollywood beckoned, any more than she refused the 1968 Best Actress prize at the Canadian Film Awards.

But the French-Canadian performer has spurned the Canadian government's honor — Officer of the Order of Canada — because it "would not be honest . . . I stick with my kind." It would be cavalier to suggest that there might be more publicity mileage to be gained from refusing to accept a government award — it could even merit a paragraph in Variety and a roguish song in the next Montreal revue.

Moviemaker Claude Jutra, who also declined the award, felt he would betray himself and his "compatriots" if he accepted. Again, a curious conversion by a man who — on an $18,000 contract with a six-figure subsidy from the National Film Board — made a good Canadian movie and who, when it did well in the Canadian Film Awards, gratefully accepted an Etrog for best feature of the year. In show business, apparently, honesty in accepting Canadian awards and rewards is a principle that doesn't arise — as long as the awards are commercial.

Systems Approach Needed By Business Agency of Any Size

MANAGEMENT MEMO

By RICHARD WILLIAMSON, Manager, Keats, Peat, Marwick and Co.

The seemingly endless stream of modern management techniques that promise a systematic approach to solving the problems of running an organization effectively and efficiently puzzle many people, including some middle and top level managers.

Confusing and sometimes contradictory terminology further compound the puzzle. Nevertheless, regardless of the nomenclature used or area of specific application, the fundamental principles remain the same.

The systems approach to business management is a formalized method of examining organizational activities. A framework is created within which the objectives of the enterprise can be clearly established. From this framework, rational decisions are made on the allocation and utilization of money, personnel, supplies, methods and time — resources which are in short supply in any organization.

The allocated resources are then deployed according to a predetermined plan and schedule. This method enables activities to be controlled by measuring results achieved (outputs) with resources expended (inputs).

SUITABLE APPLICATIONS

One of the most valuable features of the systems approach is that it can be applied at any level within an organization and to virtually all activities. The level of sophistication will depend on the complexity and objectives of the task.

At the most senior level, analytical approaches have been employed successfully to revitalize entire organizations. Establishing concrete and realistic objectives and developing functional programs for personnel management and finance open the way to innovation.

On a more mechanistic basis, investment opportunities are being investigated using these techniques. Complex evaluation of rates of return and associated risk factors of multiple alternatives are used to create balanced portfolios.

EFFECTIVENESS

The feasibility of most large capital construction projects is established on the results of systems analysis. For example, the successful design and construction of the Expo '67 facilities within stringent time constraints was largely due to the effective application of these techniques.

The principles of systems analysis have been used for many years in paperwork simplification programs. These concepts have been extended by the computer technicians to the point where they are routine in developing data processing applications.

The most serious danger associated with the systems approach is that management will accept an inadequate system or program with the belief that it will be satisfactory. The systems approach creates a model on paper. Complex, multi-dimensional, often intangible business activities are expressed in relatively simple two-dimensional concrete terms. The elaborate analysis used to build the model may, however, be based on faulty data or questionable assumptions, thereby making the model inadequate.

The more complex the situation, the more difficult it is to assess the realism of the model and inherent distortion of goals, and to determine the biases which might have been built into it.

Evaluating an existing paperwork processing procedure such as an order-invoicing application is a typical example. This type of task is often assigned to a junior analyst. Preoccupied with computer techniques, he develops the new system with the computer as the focal point and the needs of the customer and internal sales staff are not sufficiently considered.

The result may well be a costly two-year program with no tangible improvements. The analyst, because of his limited experience and viewpoint, has been unable to assess the simple, manual one-write program.

The results of these inadequacies can produce errors of monumental proportions. This is especially true when the systems approach is ineffectively linked with the use of computers. Faulty forecasting, accounting and reporting systems with the assistance of the computer can literally propagate errors throughout an organization at the speed of light.

PROBLEMS AND CHANGE

In several well-publicized cases, companies have foundered as a result of losing sight of the common practicalities by relying upon theoretical programs.

Another real problem that must not be overlooked is that these modern tools of management are instruments of change. The results of a systems study in an organization may indicate the need for changes in long-established organizational structures, procedural patterns, and personal viewpoints. There must be continual awareness of the very real problems that change creates in an organization and plans made to ensure that these difficulties are overcome effectively.

The secret of successfully applying a systems approach to the operations of an organization is simple: Use experienced, well-qualified specialists. Priority should be given to obtaining a seasoned practitioner with strong management ability, and guilding a small but capable team around him.

Any organization, whether government, institution or business, is in a competitive market. Government competes for an allocation of funds and manpower to support its programs. An institution competes for financial and social support. Business vies for a share of the market in which it can provide goods and services and make a profit.

The position of organizations in each of these areas will be considerably enhanced if intelligent use is made of systems analysis techniques to operate more effectively and efficiently, and to assist in achieving objectives.

Stud Futures Explained

VANCOUVER (CP) — Marketing of almost all forest products futures may emerge in 10 to 15 years, Warren Leback, executive vice-president and secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade, said here.

Lebeck said his visit to explain the new trading in stud lumber futures the Chicago board is conducting, was a first for the organization which has enrolled three Canadian mills.

Futures are a stock or commodity bought or sold for delivery at a future tume.

The move to stud lumber follows several years of tading in plywood futures without Canadian participation.

The three participants in stud futures are Triangle Pacific Forest Products Ltd., Canadian Forests Products Ltd. and Weldwood of Canada Ltd.

Lebeck said the board sees continuing expansion in futures trading of commodities. It is talking of a market in mortgage futures and will probably operate a gold futures market if the United States Congress allows it, he said.

The Chicago board executive said delivery is the mechanism that can make the futures market work.

Leback said the board decided to add stud lumber to the futures list to meet the rapidly growing demands for studs during the current U.S. construction boom.

Occidental Petroleum Corp. reports net income after extraordinary items for the first nine months this year of $764,000, down sharply from $54,445,000 in the corresponding period last year.

Net operating income, before a loss of $9,964,000 in extraordinary items, totalled $10,728,000 this year compared with $49,794,000, before addition of $4,651,000 in extraordinary items.

The company said its preferred dividend requirements resulted in a 25-cent loss per share this year compared with a gain of 72 cents a share in 1971.

Lafarge

Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd. reports consolidated net earnings of $15.6 million or $3.92 a share for the six-month period ended Oct. 31.

This compares with $12.2 million or $3.04 for the corresponding period last year.

Construction activity in the Vancouver area was substantially reduced by 13-week labor dispute, the company said, but strong gains in Quebec and the Maritimes accounted for a 5 per cent increase in cement consumption in Canada over the comparable period last year.

Royal Bank

The Royal Bank of Canada is acquiring, over the next three years, 40 per cent equity interest in Aetna Factors Corp. Ltd., one of Canada's largest factoring companies.

Traders Group Ltd. currently holds a 90 per cent interest in Aetna, with the remaining 10 per cent held privately.

On completion of the bank's purchase, Traders will hold 60 per cent.

Factoring is a financial service whereby a company such as Aetna buys the accounts receivable of another firm, collects them when due or advances money before the accounts fall due as a form of loan. The service is intended to save bookkeeping costs.

Quebec Completes Takeover

QUEBEC (CP) — A bill permitting the Quebec government to purchase all the shares of General Investment Corp. (GIC) passed third and final reading in the national assembly.

The bill empowers the government to convert all outstanding shares in the corporation now held by private companies and the general public into provincial bonds. It also reduces the number of GIC directors to seven from 16.

The corporation, which now is 38-per-cent-owned by the province, has interests in Marine Industries Ltd., which builds ships and railway cars, the Societe de Montage Automobile (SOMA), a car assembly plant in St. Bruno, south of Montreal, and other companies.

The industry and commerce department and Renault Canada Ltd. recently announced that SOMA would close down early next year.

Bennetts Off on World Cruise

VANCOUVER (CP) — Opposition leader W. A. C. Bennett and Mrs. Bennett sailed from Vancouver Saturday night aboard the cargo-passenger vessel Oriental Carnival on a three-month world cruise.

The cruise will take them through the Panama Canal, to Florida, the east coast of South America, South Africa and to Singapore, from which point Mr. and Mrs. Bennett will fly back to British Columbia.

The Social Credit leader, who is 72, told well-wishers he's "going away 50 and coming back 40." Hundreds of well-wishers went aboard the ship. They included a busload of party faithful, Mayor Tom Campbell of Vancouver, former cabinet ministers and officials of the Social Credit party.

Bennett said his greatest achievement in his 20 years as premier was the damming of the Columbia and Peace rivers. He said if the two rivers hadn't been dammed at the same time, it would have cost B.C. taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars more to dam them separately now.

He said his greatest disappointment was that Social Credit didn't win eight B.C. elections in a row. He said that as a baseball fan he knows you can't bat 1,000 every time and added that Social Credit is sitting this one out "only to let the others in for an inning."

Bennett said that "members of Social Credit and free enterprise, no matter what political party they're in, can sleep nights because even the socialists won't be able to spend all the money we've left for them."

He urged party supporters to get out and work for more memberships. He said that when he returns home from the cruise he wants to see 50,000 new Social Credit memberships. "You've got to have dynamic capitalism," he said, "and that means Social Credit." He described the Liberals and Conservatives as just "lazy-faire" capitalists.

ART CLASSES SLATED

Classes are divided into five age groups, from age four to 17, director Colin Graham said today. Fee for the winter session is $10 a person, which includes materials.

For children four to 12, classes are held 3:45 to 5 p.m. weekdays. Young people 13 to 17 attend class Saturdays.

Instruction in painting, drawing and work in related media is involved, said Graham. Students interested should phone or drop into the art gallery.

Graham also announced that the gallery will be closed from Dec. 23 to Jan. 2.

Man. NDP Readies for Polls

WINNIPEG (CP) — Premier Ed Schreyer told Manitoba New Democrats Sunday to be prepared for a provincial general election campaign in which the government will be attacked on everything from industrial management to welfare abuse.

With the election expected in 1973, Schreyer said party members must draw attention to the general acceptance of Manitoba's government-run automobile insurance scheme and defend efforts to develop industry in the rural areas.

He said the practice of granting welfare assistance to the able-bodied should be re-examined. Able-bodied people who refuse to work shouldn't get the same consideration that is rightly extended by society to the aged or the infirm.

Talk of widespread welfare abuse is "a bunch of nonsense," he said.

"It's not a great problem in numbers, but it is a problem psychologically . . . We can't blindly go on as we have been doing for the last 10 years."

Some of the 500-odd people attending the provincial annual convention groaned when Schreyer referred to instances of welfare money being spent on liquor instead of groceries, but the premier said these cases have to be faced.

"It isn't enough to show magnanimity," he said, adding a partial solution might be to put welfare payments on a weekly instead of a monthly basis to ensure that more of the public money goes "to sustain the wife and family in foodstuffs."

Schreyer expressed his concern about welfare abuse while speaking in support of a resolution advocating a general increase in welfare payments to meet higher living costs. The resolution was adopted unanimously.

He came back to the theme in a short talk after his return by acclamation as party leader and said the welfare abuse issue has been given more publicity than it deserves.

He said Dr. Clarence Barbed of the University of Manitoba is expected to make public in a week or 10 days the welfare study the last legislature session asked be made.

Schreyer also said his government, elected in 1969, has been subjected to too many unfair political attacks over projects to bring industry to rural areas through the Manitoba Development Corp., a government agency.

The convention's headline attraction, David Lewis, national party leader, failed to keep the engagement because a snowstorm left him grounded in Ottawa.

Hydro Dam Alternatives 'Worse'

MONTREAL (CP) — Opponents of the $6 billion James Bay hydro-electric project must realize that its alternatives, gas and oil power, are capable of worse pollution, Victor Goldbloom, minister responsible for the environment, said Sunday.

Speaking on the CBC French-language network program Politique Atout, Goldbloom said there is a great need for increased power in North America. Quebec, with its scores of untapped rivers and waterfalls, is one of the few regions capable of filling this demand.

He said the government hopes to minimize disruption to natives in the James Bay area in northwestern Quebec by concentrating construction in uninhabited areas.

The James Bay plan involves diverting five rivers and harnessing three of them.

'New Epoch' Links Greatest Museum

PARIS (UPI) — Two of the greatest museums in the world are pooling their artistic assets, launching what one museum director called "a new epoch."

The museums are the Louvre in Paris and the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, storehouses of masterworks ranging from the Mona Lisa to primitive arts of African tribes. The "Met" alone has more than 1 million art works and has the largest collection in the western hemisphere.

Culture minister Jacques Duhamel announced the move in the presence of Thomas P. Hoving, director of the Metropolitan, and Jean Chatelain, the head of all French National museums.

"The two museums are entering a new epoch," Hoving said, "an international epoch which will affect all the great museums in the world."

One aim is to make borrowing and lending of great works easier and less costly.

Another is to organize a series of special exhibits, starting in late 1973 in Paris with a showing of medieval tapestries.

Hoving also announced his museum will return to France some of the parts of a portal from the Saint-Michel De Cuxa monastery which are now in New York.

The Red Cross urgently needs 450 blood donors in the next two days.

"We're over 400 units of blood down on this time last year," Charles MacNeill, supervisor of the Red Cross blood donors' panel said today.

The accident-prone Christmas season makes such shotage all the more critical, said MacNeill.

The Red Cross will hold donor clinics today, from 2:30 to 4:30 and from 6:30 to 9 p.m. There will also be a clinic Tuesday from 1:30 to 4:30 and in the evening from 6:30 to 9 p.m.

Island Smash Kills 2

A trip to Comox ended in disaster Saturday for a Saanich peewee hockey team when two Nanaimo residents were killed and eight others were injured in a head-on car crash near Ladysmith.

Dead are Mrs. Doreen Mary Phillips, 45, of 3047 Little John Way, Nanaimo, and her 14-year-old son, Allan Roy Phillips.

Police said the crash occurred at 8:45 a.m. on the Trans-Canada Highway about two miles north of Ladysmith. The Phillips' car was travelling south when it collided with a car carrying six of the young hockey players driven by Ronald Thom, 977 Kentwood Terr., Saanich.

Thom was admitted to Ladysmith hospital with a broken arm and rib injuries. Also admitted were Jay Bowles, 3945 Morgan., with shoulder injuries and possible concussion; Tracy Patterson, 12, of 586 O'Connell, with possible concussion; and John White, 12, of 901 Garthland, with back and ankle injuries.

Four other boys were treated for minor injuries and released.

There were 16 team members on the trip, all between 11 and 12 years old. The players were a representative team from the Saanich peewee minor hockey league en route to Comox to play two exhibition games.

Four carloads, including coaches and parents, left George Pearkes Arena in Saanich at 7:30 a.m.

Three of the cars were travelling in a line with the Thom car in the middle and the fourth a short distance behind when the crash occurred.

The first car, driven by G. S. Prince, 1261 Fairlane, had just finished rounding a curve when it swerved onto a paved shoulder to avoid hitting the Phillips' car. The Thom car then collided with the Phillips' vehicle.

Prince drove a few hundred yards then turned back. By the time he was at the scene an ambulance had already arrived.

The seriously injured were placed in the ambulance and those suffering minor injuries were taken to hospital in a private car, police said.

Mrs. Phillips was killed instantly and her son died shortly after his admission to hospital.

If Women Walk the Moon That Will Be the News

The notes of a speech given to a group of local women by Miss Wendy Dey, editor of that section of the Times labelled "Family," have been simmering in the desk drawer I reserve for subjects demanding immediate attention. Only a certain craven cowardice and a desire to be adored by women genrally have kept me from addressing myself to the matter more promptly.

Before doing so I should note that Miss Dey does not approve of the descriptive "Mrs." or "Miss," once that status has been established. In our coverage of her speech, for example, it was Dey said this and Dey said that. Since I would not dream of addressing a woman in that manner you will begin to see that we agree on practically nothing.

Miss Dey was speaking on newspapers and newspapermen and their attitude to women readers and what she had to say appears to have been enormously pleasing to the women of the local Status of Women Action Group, militants all, who love nothing more, it would appear, than the assurance that men are pretty darn mean to them.

In essence, Miss Dey's theme was that the attitude of newspapers towards women is a microcosm of the attitude of our man-oriented society towards women, namely lousy. Traditionally, in Miss Dey's view, women have fared badly in the news pages. Newspapermen look upon them with "indulgent contempt." They stereotype them in the roles of beauty queens, movie stars or victims of rape. They seize upon such things as bra-burning to make the women's liberation movement seem merely humorous. They relegate the news of women's activities to "a special ghetto" of the paper — though this, Miss Dey conceded, is improving, thanks to the efforts of the women in the business.

Suppressing an ugly oath, on first reading this, I made my way across the editorial room floor to Miss Dey's desk, bent my head to the dear girl and enquired: "How do you think I got all this white hair?"

"Wrong kind of shampoo?" Miss Dey guessed.

"No," said I. "I got it from 10 years as a newspaperman worrying about women readers."

It's true, too. At one point, indeed, when I held the title of editorial director on a large newspaper, I commissioned an in-depth survey on readership generally but with particular reference to the tastes of men and women subscribers. Like all surveys it cost an awful lot to prove only what we'd known all along, that women aren't like men.

To generalize, men are conscientious readers of newspapers. They will read the foreign news, for example, because they feel a sense of duty about being informed. We got the picture of our Average Male Reader as an expressionless, stolid man who went deliberately from front to back page taking at least a sampling of every significant report.

Women, on the other hand, were clearly more selective and more intense in their reading. On the whole they did not show themselves to be readers seeking to be informed. They were much more interested in people than events. The so-called human interest story with a direct impact on their sentiment or their emotions was read and remembered. More than 90 per per cent of them — an astounding figure — religiously read all of Ann Landers every day.

In other words we found that the woman reader was a breed apart. It may be, as Miss Dey will contend, that women seldom figure in the rows except as beauty queens or movie stars or rape victims, but that was not of the newspaperman's making. When women walk on the moon or make the decisions that shape our world or fight the foolish wars or design great buildings or do anything else that can be legitimately called news that's what it will be, regardless of sex.

Miss Dey talks of the "indulgent contempt" that she fancies to be the attitude of the male editor. That would refer, I suppose, to the kind of stories selected for the woman reader.

So I went to the library and I looked at the last two issues of Chatelaine, a magazine hand-tooled for women. Here are some of the titles in those issues: Birth Control, a Shocking Report; What's Behind Today's New Marriage Styles; How Famous Mothers Cook, Party Clothes to Sew For Children; How I Lost Weight The Beautiful Way; What You Don't Know About Today's Pill; Famous Wives Tell How I Met My Husband; Let Christmas Be Natural in Decorations You Can Make, Food to Serve and Clothes to Wear.

Thirteen of Chatelaine's 14 editors (the exception being the art editor) are women. Surely even Miss Dey wouldn't argue that, in their choice of subjects that sell the magazine, they are being contemptous of their own sex. Or, come to think of it, would she?

True, the "social page" of the past, with its ridiculous, repetitious news of the upper crust ladies, was a kind of ghetto, but what Miss Dey clearly does not know or won't admit is that it was the male editors who widened the horizons of those pages practically over the dead bodies of women readers who wanted precisely that kind of idle gossip.

Certainly, today, that part of the newspaper set aside for news of particular interest to women is no more a "ghetto" than the sports or finance or viewpoint pages that cater legitimately to readers with special interests.

As for bra-burning — which, says Miss Dey, "gives the boys on the editorial desks a merry time, slapping their thighs and guffawing and making up dirty and double-entendre headlines" — I just happen to have been on the wire desk on the cold grey morning when that ceremony was first performed and the news clacked in over the teletype. The truth is that the symbolism escaped us completely and still does.

Make what you will of that, Dey.

CUPE Vote Backs School Strike

Blue collar employees of the Greater Victoria School District voted 91.6 per cent on the weekend in favor of strike action.

And a senior official of the school district said if a strike occurs, schools will have to close.

The contract renewal dispute is between the school district, second largest in British Columbia with 54 schools and 30,878 students, and Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing 269 janitors, groundsmen, tradesmen and laborers.

Union president Fred Newell said the district has "come up with no decent offer at all. If they don't come up with something, this is the only recourse we have — to strike. We don't want to."

Sig Dietze, director of facilities and school support for the district, said negotiations will carry on. He expected the dispute will be settled, as it was two years ago when a strike vote was also taken.

Asked what will happen if there is a strike, he said "the schools will suffer the consequences." Would this mean a shutdown of schools? "Yes." Is there no way schools could carry on? "No."

Newell said the employees want an increase of $1 an hour in a one-year contract, three weeks holiday after one year's work, an increase in sick benefit time, five consecutive shifts for graveyard workers and other changes.

Dietze said the school district has offered seven per cent over one year, which comes out to 25 cents an hour on the lowest pay rates but more on higher ones. He said the union has asked for increases ranging from "26 per cent to over 60 per cent" counting both a general increase and specific classification adjustments.

He said janitors and laborers earn $627 a month with electricians earning $899 a month.

School district officials said this year's wage bill for blue collar employees is $2 million.

An average 25 per cent union demand would add $500,000 and an across-the-board school district offer of seven per cent would add $140,000, they said.

The union is meeting mediation officer Clark Gilmour Wednesday for the second time, and possibly Thursday.

Newell said no strike notice has been given. "We will see how we make out with Mr. Gilmour," he said.

The current contract runs to Dec. 31 and no strike action can be taken until it expires.

Hearty welcome home for Sgt. Glen Parsons of Gatineau from his wife and family

More Water For Salmon

Members of the Greater Victoria Water Board agreed today the water district has a responsibility to ensure a steady supply of water is always available for spawning salmon in Goldstream — and that allocation will not be jeopardized by "dry years."

As a preliminary step, the board decided to allocate a provisional $100,000 in the 1973 budget for the job of diverting Council Creek into the Sooke Lake reservoir.

Water commissioner Ron Upward estimated this would provide another billion gallons a year for the water system. The department of fisheries total requirement for release of water into Goldstream is 1.5 billion gallons.

Council Creek, which drains Council Lake a few miles east of Sooke Lake, now enters the system below the dam and the proposal would be to construct a diverting ditch to bring the water into the main Sooke storage reservoir.

Fisheries department official A. F. Lill said it was possible that some federal money might be available toward this and other projects intended to help the Goldstream salmon, but the board shouldn't "count on it."

Lill speculated whether conservation groups and others interested in the environment might be inerested in helping to finance such a project by subscriptions, but Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said she doubted if that was a realistic argument.

Board chairman, Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen, agreed. He said people were often ready to volunteer labor but when it came to money it was a different story. "Their pockets aren't as deep as their voices," he said.

Upward told the board that there is a public misconception that the Greater Victoria water district has a plentiful supply of water. He said the amount of water available "is extremely variable" depending on rainfall intensity and one in every seven years turns out a "dry" year.

Meeting the federal fisheries department requests under those circumstances is extremely difficult, and he said the position the district finds itself in tends to create "a furore."

Lill said there was much public pressure on his department with regard to Goldstream, which was such a "visible, attractive resource." He said the department is considering various means of maintaining the salmon resource there by using less water, including the possible narrowing of the stream bed in certain areas.

Pollen said whether Goldstream is visible or not is irrelevant. What the board should really be considering is the importance of preserving "an irreplacable life system."

The Navy's Home in Time for Christmas

It wouldn't have mattered if it had been raining cats and dogs — or kangaroos.

The huge sodden crowd of friends and relatives that jammed the jetty in the dockyard today were oblivious to the fact that it wasn't the kind of weather the Chamber of Commerce brags about.

To them it was Christmas Day.

Aboard the three Esquimalt-based ships nosing their way in to port were 700 men they hadn't seen since Aug 28.

Shoreside, the Naden band blared out "I'll be home for Christmas" as HMCS Gatineau, HMCS Qu'Appelle and HMCS Provider came alongside.

It was strictly background music. The band's audience, both ashore and afloat had other things on their mind.

A huddle of women, among them the wife of the Gatineau's skipper, Cmdr. Tom Murphy, flourished a soaked sign of welcome.

Both Provider and Qu'Appelle were festively dressed, Provider alight with huge Christmas stars and Qu'Appelle bearing a sled and reindeer and a sign, Merry Christmas from Down Under Under.

Capt. Michael Martin, 2nd Destroyer Escort Squadron commander, took time out to tell of the "Channel fever" that had been sweeping the three ships for the past 48 hours.

"There's been men who couldn't sleep, continuous visits to the ops' room to check on the weather and to find out where we are," he said.

Home fever began ascelerating early this morning as customs officers boarded the three ships off Race Rocks to clear the mountains of gifts the men have brought back from Australia and New Zealand.

Martin complimented the men under his command for their "bearing, tact and general behaviour" during their visit to Australia and New Zealand.

"They made an awful lot of friends and put Canada in a very good light," he said.

He put the record straight on stories from "down under" that the armed forces' green uniforms had not been received with favor:

"That was only one paper that came out with a facetious story. Actually, at all the many press conferences we had about 65 per cent of the questions were about the unification of the three services, and the green uniform."

He was asked about the bomb scare aboard Gatineau when she was in Auckland:

"Bomb scares have become the thing there. In fact, there were three while we were there. There's about one a week, usually hoaxes, just as the Gatineau's one was."

How did the Canadian ships stack up against the others in the international exercises?

Without hesitation Martin replied, "They were the best!"

He paused, then added, "Of course, there was a wide range of efficiency. Some ships were fairly fresh out of refit and one had steamed non-stop from the States and they were still catching their breath."

As the press conference ended, the men's relatives jammed the gangway, anxious to get aboard.

Martin was wished a rather superfluous "Merry Christmas!"

DONORS DIGGING DEEPER

Victoria's Christmas shoppers dug a little deeper into their pockets over the weekend to the delight of the Salvation Army who report that kettle donations have caught up with last year's contributions.

Donations to date total $10,526.34, according to Major Jack Barr, who said there was "great public response" over the weekend to the Army's urgent appeal for contributions.

Last Friday the Christmas fund was $800 behind last year's total, with nearly twice as many families to help.

"We're so grateful," Barr said, "and we want people to know that we are."

This year the army hopes to send food hampers or vouchers, ranging in value from $10 to $25, to nearly 900 families in the city.

Money collected in the nine downtown kettles will also help the Army in providing dinners for men who are living alone at Christmas time and for its League of Mercy visits to nursing homes and institutions.

How much does the Army hope to collect?

"Just enough to pay the bills," Barr says. "But we've got a lot of people to help this year."

Anyone wishing to donate through the mail can send their contribution to the Salvation Army at 769 Pandora. Receipts will be sent out.

Bengalis Await Food, Housing

A 70-year-old man squatted in the ruins of a Bengali village.

He clutched a pathetic collection of old rags, stuffed into a torn jute bag — all that remained of the worldly possessions he once owned as a well-to-do man.

Over and over he kept repeating: "Where has my home gone . . ."

Finally he placed a once-white Gandhi cap on his head and trudged away, dazed by a tragedy he could not understand.

Shakim Bari is one of 10 million Bangladesh refugees.

His story is just one of the many heart-breaking tales Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova can tell of her visits to Bangladesh.

Housing is their main priority. Millions of homes and shelters were destroyed in the war and a scorched earth policy during the occupation felled countless acres of trees.

The USC has therefore initiated a large-scale project to construct at least 1,000 new homes by Christmas.

Each house, which costs $140 and will accomodate six people, measures 10 by 14 feet and is constructed of bamboo matting and a roof of asbestos iron sheets.

But housing is not the only problem.

Widespread hunger and outbreaks of cholera and smallpox need immediate attention.

Money for food and drugs as well as shelter is the aim of the USC's annual fund raising drive.

By Christmas they hope to have collected $1,000,000 in funds and $500,000 in gifts in kind for needy all over the world who suffer as the Bangeli do.

Victorians who wish to donate to the USC fund are asked to send their contributions to P.O. Box 300, Victoria or take them to any Bank of Nova Scotia. Official receipts will be sent from USC headquarters in Ottawa.

Jeans or Jewels—A Matter of Taste

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Jeans may offend the imperial dignity of the Bengal Room at the Empress but, with one or two exceptions, the general dress rule in Victoria eating establishments seems to be anything goes.

Or almost anything, with certain limits of decency.

As mine host at the Keg 'n Cleaver, 500 Fort, observed: "You're not allowed to come naked, but anything else we don't mind."

Similar toleration prevails at the Red Lion Motor Inn, 3366 Douglas, where the manager commented there are no hard-and-fast regulations on customer attire and anyone is admitted "provided he is reasonably presentable and doesn't smell."

But, as columnist Bob Hunter of the Vancouver Sun discovered, the very sight of blue-jeaned legs at the hallowed portals of the Bengal Room sets off shudders of distaste among the staff.

And it almost guarantees the wearer won't be admitted to join the sahibs and memsahibs within — unless he or she registers a strong protest with the management.

To find out how typical such experiences were, two Times reporters, appropriately bejeaned and sweatered but otherwise fairly presentable, tried to get in for lunch.

Unfortunately, we blew it — and proved nothing.

At first, though, it seemed we were getting the Hunter treatment in full, when a pleasant-faced young chap expressed his deep regret he couldn't admit us because of the "dress regulations of the hotel."

Just at that moment, however, another Empress employee with more of a stamp of authority about him sidled up from behind and said quietly "it's all right," and we could certainly enter.

It didn't take any inspired Sherlock Holmes-like deduction to figure out that he, the manager type, had spotted our cameraman lurking in the background, and had smelled two rats.

Cheated, feeling slightly embarrassed, we walked out muttering something about having changed our minds anyway.

We also made a mental note to recommend to Empress manager Louis Finamore that he mark that chap for early promotion.

Taffy Richards, who presides with Welsh conviviality over the Coach and Four in Bastion Square, as well as the McPherson Restaurant in Centennial Square, recalls the only person he ever threw out was sans shirt and shoes — which was "carrying informality a little bit far."

Richards observes it's somewhat difficult to formulate a policy on acceptable garb in these days when not to be mod is to be accused of squareness, and even the affluent folk dress casually.

"You have to be flexible, especially in the summer when the tourists are in town. A lot of them seem to be from California and they tried to dress casually," he remarked.

"We certainly don't cater for the crowned heads of Europe here."

"More or less casual" is the only policy of the Princess Mary, where the summer clientele includes camper-based tourists who are anything but formal.

"But we do have to insist sometimes that they wear shoes," said business manager Gordon Schoor.

Strangely enough, Oak Bay, that bastion of conservative good taste, displays a certain inconsistency when it comes to eating-out clothes.

The Oak Bay Marina admits some customers have been turned away for wearing jeans, and "a tie is preferred."

But the Oak Bay Beach Hotel allows jeans at lunchtime as long as the wearers look "reasonably well dressed." However, a jacket and tie are obligatory for dinner.

Hy's Steak House, 777 Douglas, has no lunchtime custom and only relaxes its jacket-and-tie rule for dinner in the summer months.

Sam Lane's Olde England Inn, 429 Lampson, professes a "quite informal" atmosphere but, really, the establishment would be happier if people didn't wear jeans.

Jean wearers, though, wouldn't be turned away.

Error Aided Escape

A 23-year-old prisoner escaped police custody through "an administrative error," Crown Prosecutor John Macintyre admitted in provincial court today.

Ronald James Page, who pleaded guilty today to escaping custody, earlier was sentenced in Victoria County Court to 18 months for possession of a restricted weapon. He was being transferred Dec. 9 to a forestry camp on the mainland when he jumped to freedom. He was recaptured last Friday.

Macintyre pointed out today, however, that Page was due to appear on a drug trafficking charge in Victoria provincial court today — and should not have been transferred.

"The transfer to a forestry camp was an administrative error," Macintyre said.

Page was remanded to Tuesday for sentencing on the escape charge.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Could you please tell me the name of the movie that was made at the south end of Patricia Bay Airport around 1942? — A.F.

A. The film you are probably referring to is Commandos Came at Dawn, filmed around Mill Bay starting in August, 1942. The movie, starring Paul Muni, was made for general theatre use and also for civilian defence groups, showing techniques of guerrilla warfare.

Q. One speaks of the weft and the woof of a woven fabric. Can these words be made plural by adding 's'? This question arose during a game of scrabble. — E.S.

A. The plural is woofs and wefts, according to Webster's dictionary.

There's Joy in Pittsburgh And in San Francisco, Too

By The Associated Press

"It took a long time, but we finally did it," said Art Rooney, only owner Pittsburgh Steelers have ever had.

The Steelers "finally" won their first National Football League title Sunday in the team's 40-year history.

"It (the wait) was worth it," the white-haired, 71-year-old Rooney said after the Steelers captured the American Football Conference's Central Division title with a 24-2 victory over San Diego Chargers.

The triumph gave the Steelers an 11-3 record, their best ever, and the homefield advantage in the playoffs, which begin next weekend.

The Steelers will entertain Oakland Raiders, AFC West champions, in the opening playoff game Saturday, at 10 a.m. PST.

Three hours later, San Francisco '49ers, champions of the National Football Conference West, will be host to the defending Super Bowl champion, Dallas Cowboys, the NFC's wildcard qualifier.

PLAYOFFS SET

The opening round of the playoffs will be completed next Sunday, with Green Bay Packers, winner in the NFC Central, at Washington Redskins, champions of the NFC East, starting at 9 a.m. PST, and Cleveland Browns, the AFC's wild-card entry, at Miami Dolphins, the AFC East winner, beginning at 12 noon.

In other regular-season finales Sunday, Cleveland downed New York Jets 26-10, New York Giants thrashed Dallas 23-3, Buffalo Bills surprised Washington 24-17, Green Bay upended New Orleans Saints 30-20, Oakland topped Chicago Bears 28-21, Detroit Lions beat Los Angeles Rams 34-17, Kansas City Chiefs edged Atlanta Falcons 17-14, Cincinnati Bengals overwhelmed Houston Oilers 61-17, Denver Broncos battered New England Patriots 45-21, and St. Louis Cardinals nipped Philadelphia Eagles 24-23.

On Saturday, Miami completed a perfect season, blanking Baltimore Colts 16-0 and San Francisco nipped Minnesota Vikings 20-17.

Defence was the key to Pittsburgh's triumph. The Steelers forced the Chargers into seven turnovers, kept San Diego in its own territory for the entire first half and held Mike Garrett to five yards rushing.

Franco Harris and John Fuqua scored for the Steelers on two-yard runs, and Terry Bradshaw passed 17 yards to Ron Shanklin for another touchdown.

Cleveland's Mike Phipps passed for two touchdowns to Frank Pitts in the Browns' victory over the Jets.

The Giants gained 174 yards on the ground to Dallas' 47, totalled 175 yards passing to the Cowboys' 85 and sacked Dallas quarterbacks five times. Norm Snead passed for two New York touchdowns and Pete Gogolak kicked three field goals.

The Green Bay-New Orleans game was unusual in that the first three touchdowns resulted either directly or indirectly from blocked field goals and a blocked punt.

Washington, losing its second in a row after winning 11 of 12, was beaten when Buffalo's Jim Braxton scored from the four with 43 seconds remaining. The Bills' O. J. Simpson captured the NFL rushing title by gaining 101 yards for a season total of 1,251 yards.

Oakland won its sixth straight, stopping Chicago on Clarence Davis' 46-yard scoring run in the final period. Bears' quarterback Bobby Douglass gained 127 rushing, giving him 968 for the season —a record for quarterbacks.

Detroit's triumph over Los Angeles left the Rams with a 5-7-1 mark, their worst since 1965.

Detroit's Greg Landry hit tight end Charlie Sanders with two second-half scoring passes after the score had been tied 17-17.

Houston led Cincinnati 10-7 in the second period before the Bengals scoring binge that included 45 points in the second half.

St. Louis' Jim Hart connected on 19 on 30 passes for 334 yards against the Eagles, including scoring plays of 65 yards to Walker Gillette and 41 yards to Bobby Moore.

Doug Dressler scored three times for Cincinnati, while Lamar Parrish intercepted two consecutive Houston passes and returned them 25 and 33 yards for touchdowns and Neil Craig returned another Oiler pass 63 yards for a major score.

AIRLIFTS CHIEFS

Kansas City's Len Dawson flipped scoring strikes of 15 yards to Otis Taylor and seven yards to Ed Podolak in the Chiefs' triumph over Atlanta.

Charley Johnson passed for three touchdowns and Floyd Little scored twice in Denver's romp over New England.

Miami's victory over Baltimore Saturday gave the Dolphins a 14-0 record, the best ever in NFL history. The Dolphins also set a league rushing record, finishing with 2,951 yards.

San Francisco clinched the NFC's Western Division title, overcoming Minnesota on John Brodie's two-yard touchdown pass to Dick Witcher with 25 seconds remaining.

Losing Scorpions Find a Silver Lining

Six unanswered baskets added up to defeat for Scorpion Men's Wear in the final of the Garden City Basketball Classic Sunday, but the Victoria senior "A" men's squad is happy with the results of a committee-room decision reached Saturday.

Scorpions received permission from the B.C. Amateur Basketball Association to participate in playdowns leading to the national championship.

The Victoria team, which doesn't play in a league, appealed a Canadian Amateur Basketball Association ruling that a team must play at least eight games in a recognized league to be eligible for post-season play.

Scorpions will face the winner of the Vancouver-based Dogwood Basketball Association in a best-of-three provincial final in February.

Seattle, led by former SuperSonic Al Hairston's 22 points, won the Garden City tourney and the Town and Country Merchants' Association Trophy with a 91-85 decision over Scorpions.

The Victoria club, which led 49-44 at half time, found itself behind when Seattle started the second half by scoring 12 straight points.

Scorpions matched Seattle point-for-point the rest of the way and even gained a little ground before time ran out.

Victoria playing-coach Bob Burrows paced the club with 27 points and collected 11 rebounds.

Brian Brumwell, who only scored two points, led the rebound department with 16 — a noteworthy total considering the Seattle club boasted a forward line averaging six feet, seven inches in height.

Scorpions gained the final with a 95-69 victory over Victoria Senior "B" League All-Stars Saturday night and Seattle grabbed the other berth with a 110-72 decision over North Island All-Stars, missing several key players from Port Alberni because of a snow storm there.

Seattle players dominated the tourney all-star list as well with the selection of Hairston, Don Rae and Dave Mahlman. The other two stars were Burrows and John Lauvaas of Scorpions.

In the consolation final, Victoria All-Stars dropped North Island, which was heavily shored up with Victoria players, 69-60.

Clippers Stretch Streak to Three

Nanaimo Clippers overcame a stubborn defence Sunday to edge Vernon Essos 3-2 for their third straight British Columbia Junior Hockey League triumph.

Dave Martens, Jim Van Camp and Brian Day scored for the Clippers, who climbed back within one point of first-place Chilliwack Bruins in the league's Coast Division.

Clippers outshot the visiting Bruins 42-24, but were hard pressed to hold out against the determined Essos after taking a 3-1 lead into the final period.

Bruins had bolstered their lead Saturday night in Chilliwack by crushing the Essos 7-3 as goalie Gordon Laxton turned in a sparkling effort, blocking 39 Vernon shots.

In another Saturday game, Bellingham Blazers won their second decision in 16 starts by toppling the Buckaroos 10-8 at Kelowna. Doug Davies notched three tallies for the Blazers, who were outshot 54-36.

On Sunday, the Blazers moved to Kamloops and were downed 5-2 by the Rockets.

FINED, OVERWEIGHT, STRIPPED OF CROWN, THEN KNOCKED OUT

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — Featherweight boxer Clemente Sanchez had his ups and downs Saturday — and even the ups led to trouble.

First Sanchez stood up for his right to wear a beard in the ring and refused to shave it off. He was fined $400.

Then the Mexican stepped up to the scales — and lost the World Boxing Council featherweight championship because he weighed 129 pounds, three over the class limit. That meant that he was disqualified and even if he had beaten Jose Legra Saturday night, the title would have been declared vacant.

From then on, Sanchez's fortunes and Sanchez himself went down.

Legra, a Cuban veteran who lives in Spain, knocked Sanchez down 10 times and stopped him in the 10th round of the scheduled 15-round fight.

"Maybe there is a Mexican who can beat me but I don't know him," said Legra, who weighed 123¼ in winning for the 132nd time against four losses and three draws as a pro. Sanchez has a 23-4-2 record.

Sanchez's first title defence also turned out poorly for the promoter as cold weather and fan apathy, stemming from Sanchez's failure to make the weight, cut deeply into the gate.

Final Rock Qualifies Esquimalt Curlers

A last-rock takeout Sunday at Duncan gave Harvey Thomson's Esquimalt rink a 7-6 victory over Howie Valleau of Duncan and a berth in the Vancouver Island mixed curling championships.

Competing in the South Island zone playdowns at Duncan Curling Club, Thomson and Valleau were tied 6-6 coming home and Thomson threw hack weight with his last rock to nudge Valleau's rock and count the winner.

Also qualifying Sunday for the Island final was Gwyn Hughes' rink from the host club with a 9-5 victory over clubmate Glen Harper. Hughes broke open the match by counting four on the fourth end to take a 5-1 lead.

The other two rinks to qualify from the South Island were Jim Fennell of Victoria Curling Club and Gary Merrett of Duncan, who went undefeated through Saturday's play.

All four rinks will compete against four North Island survivors in the Island final at Port Alberni Feb. 9 and 10. North Island winners at Nanaimo on the weekend were George Bayford and Ray McKay, both of Campbell River, Warren Paul of Port Alberni and Norm Theissen of Nanaimo.

The winner at Port Alberni will advance to the provincial championships Feb. 26 and 27 at New Westminster against the Lower Mainland champion, two rinks from the Fraser Valley zone and four from the B.C. Curling Association.

Thomson had Shirley Gray, Chuch Coell and Wilma Fenwick with him. On the Hughes rink were Betty James, Bert Oud and Jacquie Ryzak. Fennell's foursome included Claire Duncan, Barry Kendall and Barb Harkensen. On the Merrett rink were Ellen Williams, Hugh Williams and Judy Merrett.

Fennell scored four straight victories to qualify while Merrett drew a first-round bye, then won three in a row.

Victoria Curling Club's Keith Dagg and Racquet Cub's Don Matheson, both zone representatives last year, were eliminated Saturday. Dagg lost, 12-9, to Al Patterson of Esquimalt while Matheson lost to Harper, 8-6.

By George, He Speared Linesman

It was a rough night for linesmen and referees in the Western Canada Hockey League Sunday.

Officials working the Edmonton Oil Kings-Regina Pats game had to contend with two major brawls in the last nine seconds and handed out 37 penalties in the game Regina won 5-2. Linesman Andy Legasse was shaken up after he was speared by David George of Edmonton during the last-second fireworks.

At Swift Current, officials called 45 penalties, including 31 to Saskatoon Blades, who rallied for a 4-4 tie with the Broncos. Blades' coach Jackie McLeod was tossed out of the game midwny through the third period for screaming at the referee.

In other games Sunday, Flin Flon Bombers downed Winnipeg Jets and New Westminster Bruins edged Calgary Centennials by identical 3-2 scores. Saturday, Edmonton tripped Medicine Hat Tigers 7-4 while Flin Flon defeated Brandon Wheat Kings 5-2.

Only 10 minor penalties had been called in the Regina-Edmonton clash until Clark Gillies scored his third goal for the Pats with nine seconds remaining. After the goal, George speared Legasse and three fights broke out.

Order was restored, but the players went at it again after time expired. George and Oil King team-mate Terry McDonald received game misconducts, as did Regina's Brad Anderson.

Saskatoon's Don McLeod scored twice in the final two minutes of the third period to help the Blades salvage the tie against Swift Current. The tying goal came with only five seconds to play.

Saskatoon bore the brunt of the penalty-calling in Swift Current, drawing 19 minors, five majors, five misconducts and two game misconducts in addition to the gross misconduct charge against the coach. Swift Current took 12 minors and three majors.

New Westminster Bruins decided to wear their helmets in the 3-2 win over the visiting Calgary Centennials. Some players did not wear the protective headgear in a game with Victoria last week and the Bruins were ordered to pay a fine and forfeit their victory.

Bombers' victories over Brandon and Winnipeg left them with six wins, two losses and one tie on their latest road trip.

The Oil Kings used four power-play goals to score Saturday's victory at Medicine Hat.

Cougars, idle at the weekend, swing back into action Tuesday night at Memorial Arena against New Westminster.

Cougars have recalled goaltender Perry Mulhall, 18, and leftwinger Dave Martens from Nanaimo of the B.C. Junior League. Mulhall will serve as backup to Dan Rogers, Cougars' starting netminder.

Martens suffered a broken wrist during Cougars' training camp and only recently returned to action.

Red Wings Get Tougher As Training Eases Up

By The Canadian Press

Detroit Red Wings have begun to burn under take-it-easy training, where they only smouldered under rigid calesthenics instituted this year to enhance the National Hockey League Club's staying power.

After their fastest season start in 47 years, the Wings went into a tailspin. Last week Marcel Dionne, last year's rookie scoring sensation, and this season's top Detroit scorer, was suspended for missing a Sunday game with Vancouver Canucks.

Coach Johnny Wilson's future in Detroit was in doubt and the Red Wings continued to plummet in the East Division standing to the point they were just managing to hold fifth ahead of Toronto Maple Leafs.

Red Wing veterans Red Berenson, Alex Delveechio and Gary Bergman were getting the raspberries from the Olympia Stadium faithful along with newcomer Thommy Bergman of Sweden.

The Red Wing picture may have changed during the weekend, however, with back-to-back victories at Toronto and at home Sunday against Minnesota North Stars.

The Wings turned back Toronto 4-1 and Minnesota 6-4 and Dionne—reinstated Wednesday—played a role in the double victories, scoring once in each game.

Elsewhere Sunday the scores were: Buffalo Sabres 4, Toronto 0; Boston Bruins 5, Philadelphia Flyers 3; New York Rangers 9, Pittsburgh Penguins 1; Chicago Black Hawks 2, Los Angeles Kings 0 and Atlanta Flames 4, New York Islanders 0.

In other Saturday games, Minnesota beat the Rangers 5-1, Philadelphia edged the Islanders 2-1, Buffalo nipped St. Louis Blues 4-3, Vancouver took California Golden Seals 4-3, Pittsburgh downed Atlanta 5-3 and Montreal Canadiens defeated Los Angeles 3-1.

Pittsburgh visits Boston in Tuesday's only scheduled game.

Mickey Redmond engineered the Detroit win at home. A 42-goal scorer last season, Redmond tallied his 15th of the year in the first period that set up a 1-1 tie, then fed scoring passes to Al Karlander, Dionne and Berenson.

Wilson admitted after Saturday's game he was mildly surprised when the Wings forechecked Toronto into costly mistakes.

He said the team had altered it's strenuous program after the Dionne incident had been cleared up.

"We haven't been on the ice since last Wednesday," Wilson said in a pre-game interview when asked what his game preparations had been. He said the players had just loafed for three days.

But while the Wings were cleaning up their weekend opposition, so were the Sabres who trimmed St. Louis on Gerry Meehan's fluke goal at 12:24 of the third period.

A shot by Hugh Harris bounced off the legs of defenceman Barclay Plager and Meehan into the goal.

The Leafs displayed more aggressiveness against the Sabres than they've shown in several games, but were still no match for the Buffalo club that remained 12 points up on Detroit and just two behind the second-place Bruins and Rangers.

Meehan scored his 17th goal in 16 games and Rene Robert his 13th in 12 games as goaltender Dave Dryden rang up his first shutout of the season in turning aside 21 Toronto shots.

The Bruins bolted into a 5-0 lead at Philadelphia, supported by two-goal performances of rookie Greg Sheppard and Ken Hodge, then were forced to turn back a Flyers' rally.

Boston defenceman Carol Vadnais was held by Philadelphia police for possible assault charges after the game in which a fan, 57-year-old Ryerson Mausert, claimed Vadnais struck him with his stick.

"I didn't touch him with my stick," claimed Vadnais, "but he grabbed my stick and punched me in the face. . . . I was just trying to tie up the puck."

At New York, Gene Carr, a three-goal scorer prior to the game, doubled his output to pace the Rangers' against rookie goaltender Denis Herron.

Daryll Edestrand ended Gilles Villemure's shutout with a power-play goal at 10:45 of the third period in a game that saw New York's young defenceman, Ab Demarco, and Pittsburgh veteran Bryan Hextall assessed unusual penalties in the final period.

Demarco took a double minor and Hextall a triple minor for their match-up.

Tony Esposito handled only 22 shots in posting his second shutout of the year and Cliff Koroll tallied his 15th of the year at 8:20 of the first period for the winning margin at home against the Kings.

At Atlanta, goalie Phil Myre registered his second shutout as the Flames extended the Islanders' winless string to 13 games.

MAKI MAY BE HOME WITHIN A WEEK

VANCOUVER (CP) — Wayne Maki of the Vancouver Canucks could be released from hospital within a week, Hal Laycoe, vice-president of the National Hockey League team, says.

Laycoe said Maki is out of the intensive care ward and is in satisfactory condition at Royal Columbian Hospital in New Westminster.

He said Maki would continue treatment as an outpatient once he is discharged.

The 28-year-old left winger underwent emergency surgery for removal of a brain tumor.

Hull Worth Price In Terms of Goals

Teams in the World Hockey Association anted up $1 million earlier this year to get Bobby Hull into the league, thereby robbing the rival National Hockey League of one of its biggest drawing cards.

Winnipeg Jets came across with another estimated $1.5 million to get the Golden Jet to sign.

★ ★ ★

Various court proceedings brought against the 33-year-old winger by his former employers, Chicago Black Hawks, kept Hull out of the Jets' lineup for several weeks.

But he's in full swing now and Sunday scored his 18th goal of the year and set up Wally Boyer's winner as Winnipeg edged New York Raiders 4-3 before 10,219 at Madisch Square Garden.

Winnipeg, on an extended seven-game road trip, maintained its 12-point lead over Minnesota in the Western Division race after the Fighting Saints defeated Chicago Cougars 4-2.

In other Sunday games, Eastern-division leading New England Whalers were surprised 6-3 by Philadelphia Blazers but continued to lead Cleveland by six points when the Crusaders were edged 3-2 by Quebec Les Nordiques.

Alberta Oilers finally found the winning formula, 3-1, over Ottawa Nationals and Los Angeles Sharks tied Houston Aeros 4-4 in other Sunday contests.

The Barber May Win

EDMONTON (CP) — The procedures committee of the Canadian Federation of Amateur Baseball wants to make excessively long hair a no-no.

Chairman Ron Hayter says the committee, which met recently in Regina, recommended that players in national playoffs should not be permitted to have hair longer than two inches below the ear lobes.

The recommendation will go before the federation's executive for ratification at a meeting in Montreal Jan. 20-21.

Hayter said the long-hair ban was sparked by "a flood of complaints" about the appearance of the Ontario team which won the 1972 junior championship.

"They were a pretty scruffy-looking bunch," he said. "Some players had hair down to the middle of their shoulders. They were winners on the field, but they looked like losers.

"We believe appearance is important. We're not advocating brushcuts or anything such as that, just reasonableness in hair length."

CORTINA.
EVERY YEAR IT GETS HARDER TO MAKE IT TOUGHER.

But we do.
Because we know Canada is a tough place for a little economy import to make it.

A few years ago we took an already tough little import and completely redesigned it to make it even tougher. The result was the "all-new" Cortina we introduced in 1971.

It was one tough little car. And since then we've been looking for ways to make it even tougher.

This year we've added an energy-absorbing bumper system. In front, it consists of a heavy steel bumper, a full-width steel reinforcement behind the bumper, large mounting brackets and two Ford Motor Company designed impact-absorbing devices mounted to the front of the frame.

And we introduced even more stringent quality control checks.

But that's all, because Cortina already has the things an economy car needs to take on Canada's rugged driving conditions. And come out ahead.

To handle the roughest roads, Cortina has a Short and Long Arm front suspension system designed for a quieter ride and improved handling. The traditional rear leaf springs are replaced by a 4-bar link system. It controls the location of the rear axle during cornering, virtually eliminating any tendency to "axle hop".

To handle high-speed highway driving, Cortina has a 2-litre Overhead Camshaft engine. It has plenty of torque for quick acceleration and effortless freeway cruising, without sacrificing economy. And in the city, where driving is often stop-and-go, Cortina's power front disc brakes give straight, fast stops.

And to resist the salt-soaked slush Cortina's body has a special rust resisting electro-coated phosphate undercoating.

Those are just some of the features built into every Cortina, to handle the rigorous driving conditions it might come up against in Canada.

On the inside, we had a different set of priorities. Comfort and convenience.

The fully reclining front bucket seats were scientifically designed to give increased lumbar and lateral support.

The fitted loop-pile carpeting, not only adds a luxury touch to Cortina, but also acts as a sound insulation against road noise.

The front and rear grab handles were designed as a convenience to assist entry and exit.

And there's an electric rear window defroster, to keep the frost off on cold winter mornings.

In short, we built everything into Cortina that would make it a tough and durable little car, with all the comfort you want.

And with nearly everything already standard, there's only one option to offer. The silk-smooth 3-speed automatic transmission. A radio is available as a dealer-installed accessory. And that's all.

Test drive the 2-door, the 4-door or the sporty 2-door GT. You'll find Cortina tough to beat.

Skrien Has 101 Reasons

REGINA (CP) — Dave Skrien, whose resignation as head coach of Saskatchewan Roughriders was announced Saturday, says he "wants to look at the possibility" of opening negotiations with Montreal Alouettes or Toronto Argonauts.

The 43-year-old Skrien, who coached the Roughriders to the 1971 Grey Cup in the Canadian Football League, said there are "101 reasons" for his move, many of which would be difficult to explain.

"It's a good time for me to look elsewhere. The club has been winning for three years. It might be a good time for the club, too, because changes are needed."

He did not elaborate on the changes.

However, veteran quarterback Ron Lancaster has indicated he isn't happy with his lot with the Roughriders and believes he can make more money elsewhere.

Skrien, whose resignation is effective Jan. 1, said Saturday in an interview he wants to stay in coaching but has no preference about whether he should remain in Canada or return to the United States.

Both Montreal and Toronto in the Estern Football Conferences got rid of their head coaches this fall.

The crew-cut Skrien said he was offered a new, two-year contract by Saskatchewan but turned it down.

Skrien, a native of Brooten, Minn., said he enjoyed his stay in Regina "but I didn't think I wanted to live here for the rest of my life."

In Toronto, Argo general manager John Barrow admitted he was "impressed by his track record."

"He (Skrien) has done a good job, especially this year when Regina got off to a poor start. He's soft-spoken and doesn't come on as a strong personality — but he's strong all right." The Toronto opening followed the firing of Leo Cahill shortly after the 1972 season ended and the Argonauts had fallen from Grey Cup contenders to also-rans in the East.

"I hope to make my recommendations before the end of the month," Barrow said of negotiations with candidates for the Toronto job.

DAVE SKRIEN
... changes are needed

The one-time all-Canadian defensive lineman, who played against Skrien-coached B.C. teams in the 1963 and 1964 national finals said he had been concentrating his search for a new coach in the U.S. and had narrowed the final choice down to two men.

"Now that Skrien's available, he's someone else to definitely consider," said Barrow.

Screaming Fans Erupt in Riot

ROME (Reuter) — Hundreds of enraged fans of the Roma soccer team battled with police amid clouds of tear-gas after invading the pitch in violent protest over a last-minute penalty scored by visiting Inter Milan here Sunday.

The turmoil was provoked by a man rushing onto the grass and punching referee Alberto Michelotti after Inter striker Boninsenga scored from the penalty spot to put his side 2-1 in the lead.

Waves of screaming fans from the 65,000 crowd then leaped over the barriers and were met by police baton charges and tear-gas as Michelotti and the players ran for the dressing rooms.

Police managed to clear the pitch, but the demonstrators rushed off to batter on the dressing room doors. It took another series of baton charges and more tear-gas to disperse them from the Olympic stadium.

Referee Michelotti did not emerge from his room until over an hour after the end of the match. Although reporters said there had been 30 seconds of play left, the official declined to say whether the game had been abandoned.

It was reported later that four policemen and about a dozen spectators were hurt, one seriously.

Police said they had arrested one of four persons they were questioning on charges of attacking a government official.

The man, Silvio Bastianelli, 27, was jailed.

Under Italian law, a soccer referee has the status of a government official while he is officiating a match.

Italian Teenager 2-for-2 in Skiing

MADONNA DI CAMPGILIO, Italy (AP) — Piero Gros of Italy, the 18-year-old sensation of the young ski racing season, won the men's giant slalom Sunday for his second victory in as many World Cup starts.

The triumph bolted Gros into the lead in the World Cup standings with 50 points to 38 for runner up David Zwilling of Austria.

Gross snaked his way down the course with runs of 49.84 and 50.57 seconds for a winning time of 100.41 seconds. There were 55 gates on the first run and 59 gates and some rough turns on the second.

Gustavo Thoeni of Italy was second with runs of 48.93 and 51.55 and 100.48. Christian Neureuther of West Germany, who led after the first run with 48.90, was third after a second try of 51.78 for 100.68.

Give Character Credit

Character, desire and hustle combined Sunday night to help Houston Rockets wipe out a 28-point deficit in the third period and give them a 110-109 National Basketball Association victory over Cleveland Cavaliers.

"We showed a lot of character in the second half," said Houston coach Tex Winter.

"Hustle and desire won it."

The Rockets stormed back behind Jack Marin and Mike Newlin. Three baskets by Marin, who scored 35 points overall, cut the lead to 93-80 at the end of three quarters.

The Rockets finally tied the Cavaliers on Newlin's layup with 3:27 to go that made the score 102-102.

Marin's shot with 1:58 remaining gave Houston the lead for good.

In the other games Sunday, Phoenix Suns beat Kansas City-Omaha Kings 112-102 and Boston Celtics walloped Seattle SuperSonics 123-98.

In Saturday night's games, New York Knicks beat Chicago Bulls 97-83, Buffalo Braves walloped Philadelphia '76ers 126-103, Atlanta Hawks topped Cleveland 100-94, Houston turned back Detroit Pistons 123-112, Boston beat Portland Trail Blazers 123-116 and Baltimore Bullets defeated Golden State Warriors 105-99.

Led by Charlie Scott, Phoenix scored 36 points in the third quarter to beat Kansas City-Omaha. Scott finished with 26 points.

Boston won its ninth straight game with a torrid second quarter that knocked Seattle out of contention.

UNIVERSITY CLUB EXTENDS SELECTS

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Two goals within nine seconds during the third period powered Moscow Selects to a 5-2 win over Laurentian University Voyageurs Sunday.

It was Moscow's fifth victory on their Ontario tour. One game was tied.

The Voyageur fans had their hopes raised as Frank Hamill opened the scoring in the first minute's play and it took the Selects more than 18½ minutes to tie the score on a shot by Mikhail Titov.

Laurentian slacked the pace in the early minutes of the second period and the Russians took advantage to score two quick goals by Alexander Martynuk and Viktor Shalimov, the last goal coming when they were a man short.

In the third period, the game was delayed for almost 10 minutes when the Moscowšs Yuri Shatalov picked up a 10-minute misconduct and then a game misconduct for disputing a call by referee Jim Ramsay.

Bill Best scored Laurentian's second goal at 5:48 of the third period while the Russians were playing one man short.

After appearing in danger of losing their lead, the Selects finally wrecked Voyageur hopes with goals at 12:27 and 12:36 by Titov and Vladimir Popov.

Over the route, the Russians outshot the collegians 44-33.

A Coast-to-Coast Double

Times News Services

Laffitt Pincay made it a coast-to-coast double Saturday as he rode Knightly Dawn to a three-length victory in the $115,700 California Juvenile Stakes at the Bay Meadows track in San Mateo, Calif.

Knightly Dawn covered the one and one-sixteenth miles in 1:42 4-5 and paid $5.60, $4.40 and $3.60 as he breezed home in front of Double Variety, another three lengths ahead of third-place Real Decision.

It was the third victory in 12 starts for the bay colt and the $70,700 winner's share of the purse raised to $100,753 his earnings for owner Sigmund Somner, a New York contractor.

The California triumph completed an east-west double for Somners, whose horse Paraje earlier Saturday won the $55,950 Display Handicap at Aqueduct in New York.

Paraje took the lead just before hitting the stretch and drew out to win by five lengths in the two and one-quarter mile event as thoroughbred racing in New York closed for 1972.

Guided by Jorge Velasquez, Paraje galloped home in 3:56 2-5 under 109 pounds in beating Rule By Reason with Sunney And Mild another nine lengths back in the show position.

Paraje earned $33,510 and returned $15.60, $5.60 and $4.40.

It was the second straight Display victory for Paraje and the third in a row for Somner.

In Philadelphia, jockey Jimmy Moseley, injured in a mishap two days earlier, came back Saturday to pilot Impecunious to victory by a head in the $85,175 Heritage Stakes at Liberty Bell racetrack.

In the lead most of the way in the one and one-eighth mile test for two-year-olds, Impecunious lost the lead to Hey Rube in the stretch and then rallied to nip Hey Rube at the wire.

The winner earned $51,105 and was timed in 1:49 4-5.

Dowling Defeated

BOSTON — John Dowling of Victoria barely missed Saturday in a bid to make it an all-Canadian show in the semi-final round of the United States junior squash championship.

After romping past Bill Strong of Princeton University earlier Saturday, Dowling lost a marathon struggle against Dave Bottger in the quarter-final round.

The third-ranked Philadelphian outlasted Dowling in an 18-17, 17-18, 15-12, 9-15, 18-17, thriller to reach the semis with three Toronto players — Ian Shaw, Steve Hisey and John Shales.

Scots Fall in Rugby Thriller

EDINBURGH (AP) — The New Zealand All Blacks outlasted Scotland, 14-9, in a Rugby Union thriller here Saturday.

A try by Sid Going in the last-minute clinched victory for the All Blacks after they had stood up to mounting pressure from the Scots.

New Zealand led by 6-0 at halftime. A crowd of 60,000 watched the Scots fight back in exciting fashion in the second half.

The New Zealanders failed to score until the stroke of halftime. Then Going started a movement which ended with Alan Wyllie diving over for a try.

Joe Karama converted with a kick which curled just inside the far post.

A penalty goal by Andy Irvine early in the second half put new heart into Scotland. But after 18 minutes of the half B. J. Robertson kicked forward and Grant Batty followed up for a try to make it 10-3 for New Zealand.

The Scots then made their great effort. Ian McGeechan, in his first international match scored a fine drop goal to cut the All Blacks' lead to 10-6.

With the big crowd cheering them on, the Scots stepped up the pressure. They found the New Zealanders a tough team to get past, but with 11 minutes to go Irvine kicked another penalty goal from 55 yards.

The Scots appeared capable of grabbing their first-ever victory over the All Blacks, but in the final seconds Going intercepted a Scottish pass and sprinted 25 yards along the touchline for the decisive try.

OTTAWA — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand says the government has yet to decide what sort of bill it will put before Parliament to replace the soon-to-expire legislation banning hanging for all but a few murderers.

Interviewed on the television network program Question Period, Allmand said he hoped Parliament would deal with the issue "as soon as possible."

Capital punishment was suspended for a five-year trial period in 1967 for all crimes but the murder of police and prison guards. The trial period ends Dec. 29 this year.

The country then goes back to the old law under which a person can be hanged for capital murder . The cabinet can commute death sentences ital murder. The cabinet can CHICOUTIMI, Quebec — Yrone Dumais, assistant to the president of the Rallieement Creditiste organization for Saguenay - Lac-Saint-Jean has announced his candidacy for the party leadership.

A leadership convention is to be held Feb. 3 and 4 in Quebec City.

MUNICH — Film director William Dieterle, famed for Hollywood biographies and The Hunchback of Notre Dame, has died at age 79.

The announcement of the death and subsequent burial was delayed in compliance with a request by his widow.

Dieterle, a native German, had been living in West Germany since 1958 following more than two decades of film making in Hollywood. Cause of death was not reported.

BROADSTAIRS, England — U.S. Ambassador Walter H. Annenberg was met Sunday by shouting demonstrators when he arrived to attend the annual Christmas carol service conducted by Prime Minister Edward Heath.

More than 40 persons shouted such slogans as "Stop bombing in Vietnam," and "Peace on earth means peace in Vietnam," When Allenberg and his wife arrived at the grand ballroom.

DARLINGTON, Eng. — Kate Vallin, known before a sex-change operation as Howard Vallin, left a marriage registry office in tears after being told her wedding could not take place.

Miss Vallin, in her 20s and wearing a long gown and a short veil over her blonde hair, had arrived at the office registry to marry George Metcalfe.

Twenty minutes after the ceremony was to have begun, the couple left the office by a side door and drove off in a taxi through a crowd of lookers-on and newsmen.

The registrar said there was no wedding because certain papers were not available.

NEW YORK — Terence Cardinal Cooke celebrated a "rock mass" Sunday for about 20 youngsters in the pediactrics section of Memorial Sloan-Kettering centre for cancer research.

Cardinal Cooke read a special Christmas message which President Nixon sent to him to deliver to the children.

JERUSALEM — King Hussein of Jordan has left his second wife, Princess Muna, to marry an announcer on Jordanian television, the newspaper Al Anba said today.

Quoting visitors arriving from Amman, the government-supported newspaper said Hussein had wed Souha Toukan a week ago.

Hussein has not divorced Muna, who bore him two sons, because Moslem law provides that he can have four wives.

BERLIN — A West German theatre historian says he has discovered a previous unrecognized play by William Shakespeare in the British Museum.

Dr. Christopher Koehler said the play, The Birth of Hercules, has been attributed to various contemporaries of Shakespeare.

But it had never previous been regarded as a work by Shakespeare himself until it was dug out at the British Museum by Duesseldorf theatre historian Dieter Schamp.

Koehler said Schamp has produced "the exact, flawless proof" that it is an early work by Shakespeare. He says the manuscript is in Shakespeare's own hand and contains allusions which back up the claim.

POET, 30, WEDS ACTRESS OF 72

CASALE MONFERRATO, Italy (AP) — A 72-year-old actress has married a 30-year-old poet and painter who pledged to make her happy.

The bride was Paola Borboni, who in 1922 shocked an Italian audience by baring her bosom in a comedy. The bridegroom was Bruno Vilar.

It was the first marriage for both.

She said she decided to marry "because of the pressing solicitations of Bruno and because my mother did not like our living together without marriage."

Miss Borboni's mother is 102.

A DEGREE FINALLY

OXFORD, England — Mabel Fitzgerald has graduated as a master of arts from Oxford University.

"Better late than never," said Mabel, who is 100 years old.

She passed all the examinations nearly 80 years ago but Oxford did not give degrees to women then.

The omission was corrected by the award of an honorary degree where Mabel turned up in an ambulance and a wheelchair.

"The rush has left me quite exhausted," she said.

ALCOHOL TAGGED TOP DRUG ISSUE

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says the federal government, which spends close to $5 million a year on drug treatment, research and education, plans to shift its emphasis from illicit street drugs to alcohol.

The newspaper says that in a telephone interiew Dr. A. B. Morrison, director-general of the food and drug directorate, named alcohol as one of the first concerns since "it's the major drug problem we have."

Mr. Morrison is quoted as saying that a "huge" number of young people now are copying adults and using alcohol and other drugs unwisely.

"If we're worried about marijuana, we'd better be 100 times more concerned about alcohol," said Dr. Morrison. "We're having a major review about what we can do in the alcohol area. It's a very complicated business."

The Star quotes Dr. Morrison as saying that most efforts at alcohol control are not effective: "There may be things other than education that we can do."

Dr. Morrison refused to say what measures are under review. However, several months ago, sources in the beverage industries predicted that the government would increase taxes on some types of beer and wine as part of a plan to attack alcoholism.

"Adult society is involved with alcohol in a way that doesn't make me feel they can discipline themselves," Dr. Morrison said. "I can't pick on kids as being major drug abusers and I don't believe they are."

Prepaid Legal System Likely Next Year

A spokesman for the British Columbia branch of the Canadian Bar Association said Sunday in Vancouver that B.C. may have a prepaid legal services plan within a year.

Sholto Hebenton, Vancouver lawyer and chairman of the association's special committee on the prepaid plan, said the program will be designed in its earlier stages for groups such as teachers' associations and unions.

He said eventually it could be extended to include all persons in the middle-income sector — those between the rich and those poor enough to qualify for free legal aid.

He said his committee has been working on the plan for several months and hopes to present several ideas to a B.C. branch meeting Feb. 1. Hebenton said work on the plan will continue and more definite proposals will be ready for the branch's annual meeting in Victoria in June.

Government changes to existing legislation could be made at the fall session next year and the plan could be functioning on an experimental basis by the end of the year, he said.

Hebenton warned, however, the plan could easily run into stumbling blocks which would throw his timetable out by at least several months. He said the association would have to be sure there would be sufficient public response to the plan before establishing it.

Hebenton said the plan would cater to the middle-income group because it is a sector that currently has unequal access to legal services.

He said the rich can afford lawyers and the poor have the right under the existing legal aid program to free help when they need it.

Two Victoria lawyers expressed doubts today whether such a prepaid legal services plan would work in B.C.

"I wouldn't count on it as a sure thing," said R. B. Hutchison, chairman of the legal aid committee of the Victoria Bar Association.

Legal services cannot be compared to medical services, said Hutchison. Everyone needs a doctor from time to time, but not everyone needs a lawyer, he said.

And if a person thinks he's probably not going to need a lawyer, he's not going to want to pay regular premiums, Hutchison said.

"The people in the middle (income sector) ... when they're going to need a lawyer it's going to be in a domestic area," he said. Divorces are too expensive for clients, he said, but they're not profitable enough to attract many lawyers into the family law field.

The solution, said Hutchison, should probably be legal aid on a socialized basis for all domestic problems, rather than a prepaid legal services plan.

Louis Lindholm, president of the Victoria Bar Association, said, "I'm personally not satisfied that a demand for this kind of (legal services) insurance on the part of the public has been sufficiently voiced."

Cabinet Removes Ceiling On Civil Servant Wages

The NDP government has taken one more step towards its stated aim of providing its employees with free collective bargaining rights.

An order-in-council passed by the cabinet last Thursday rescinds the previous limit of 6½ per cent governing salary increases to all B.C. civil servants.

The 6½ per cent limit was imposed by the Social Credit government April 6, 1972. It went along with a limit of 6½ per cent imposed on teachers' salary increases without getting taxpayer approval.

The new government has established a five-man committee which is preparing recommendations for legislation which will set up collective bargaining for the 25,000 government employees. The committee is due to make its report before Christmas to Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall.

In previous years, the Social Credit government was in the habit of announcing the annual increase in salary for civil servants at a December banquet in honor of retiring employees and 25-year veterans. This year, there was no increase announced, and Premier Barrett told the gathering that civil servants will have to earn their increase this year, through collective bargaining procedures.

It is expected legislation will be ready to introduce in the coming session of the legislature, which opens Jan. 25. The rescinding of the former 6½ per cent limit paves the way for that legislation.

City Cash Backs Ulster 'Loyalists'

Financial aid for Loyalist organizations in Northern Ireland is being sought by a Victoria-based group, the Ulster Committee of B.C.

Ads appeared in both local newspapers on the weekend asking for donations to "support Loyalist Ulster in her darkest hour."

The committee's 100 members, most of them from Victoria, have already sent about $1,000 to William Craig, former Stormont MP and chairman of both the Ulster Vanguard and the Central Loyalist Council in Northern Ulster Defence Association Ireland.

Liaison officer Ken Patton, a Belfast-born architect who lives at 2321 Cranmore, said he cannot guarantee the money might not be channelled to groups like the Ulster Defence Association for violent purposes.

"All I can say is that we leave it up to the Central Loyalist Council in Northern Ireland how to use the funds," he said.

"A lot of our people, however, would be most upset if their money was to be used for arms or material," he added. Much of the money will be used for emergency relief and publicity, Patton said.

Groups like Ulster Vanguard and the Ulster Defence Association are members of the Central Loyalist Council.

The committee was formed about a year ago with the common belief that the Protestant majority in Northern Ireland "must have the right to determine their future," said Patton.

Heroin Kills 6

HONG KONG (AP) — Six American sailors have died in Hong Kong from apparent heroin overdose since July, and the U.S. consulate says it is determined to work closely with the Hong Kong government to halt the use of the drug. The aircraft carrier Enterprise now is in Hong Kong on a week-long rest and recreation visit. Several of its 5,000-man crew have been treated here for heroin overdoses, and one man is suspected to have died from an overdose.

CHRISTMAS'

Tanker Speed Limit Proposed

SEATTLE (AP) — Almost all large oil tankers would be required to have constant tugboat escort while in restricted waters or harbors of Puget Sound under a recommendation approved by the Washington State Oceanographic Commission and the Oceanographic Institute of Washington.

The move is intended to reduce the speed of tankers over 50,000 tons deadweight from their accustomed 15 knots to five knots, a commission spokesman said.

The controversial recommendation was one of several approved Friday in a joint meeting of the two agencies. Some other proposals contained in a $100,000 study, however, were not acted upon and thus will go to the 1973 legislature without recommendation.

The most controversial recommendation would set up strict equipment and safety standard for tankers over 50,000 tons to proceed through Puget Sound without tugboat escort.

The standards include two operating radar sets, double skin on fuel and liquid cargo compartments, twin screws or bow thrusters and power in the ratio of one horsepower to each 2½ tons deadweight capacity.

"There's not a tanker in the world that complies with those requirements," said Roderick Edwards, a consultant to the American Institute of Shipping and former Coast Guard admiral.

Another recommendation would make pilots responsible for halting any ship from entering the sound if it fails to meet certain safety standards. In addition, pilots would be required to take at least seven hours rest between assignments of more than seven hours.

"We have logsheets that show continuous service by some pilots of as much as 30 hours," said Griffith-Evans Jr., executive secretary of the commission.

Weymouth said an oil cooperative had spent $250,000 on cleanup equipment based in Bellingham and had authorized expenditure of another $200,000 for oil skimmers to be based in Seattle and Tacoma. He said the cooperative also provided a $70,000 annual subsidy for a commercial oil cleanup service.

Edgar Weymouth, northwest manager for the Western Oil and Gas Association, said most of the recommendations were "well-intentioned, purposeful and praiseworthy," but criticized others as unnecessary.

ESCAPE FAILS BY INCH

LONDON (UPI) — Harry Roberts spent about nine months digging his way to an escape from a cell in the "Alcatraz of Britain" and failed by one inch.

Roberts, serving a 30-year sentence for killing three policemen in 1966, just failed to tunnel out of the Parkhurst Prison on the Isle of Wight earlier this month.

Prison officials said Roberts apparently spent about nine months cutting and drilling into the three-foot reinforced concrete wall separating his cell from the prison's exercise yard.

When he was discovered, officials said, only an inch separated him from the outside world.

But once through the wall, they said, Roberts would have had to cross the floodlit exercise yard, dodging closed-circuit television cameras scanning the area, cut through two high wire fences and scale the prison's outer wall to make good his escape.

Mercy Flight Ends In Death

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A mercy mission has ended in apparent disaster for four United States Coast Guardsmen and the four fishermen they saved from a sinking shrimp boat. Their rescue helicopter crashed into the Gulf of Mexico.

"We've found some debris from the helicopter near the spot where we lost communications with them but we've found no survivors or bodies," a coast guard spokesman said late Sunday.

The big twin-engine helicopter and its crew left St. Petersburg Saturday afternoon to go to the aid of the 54-foot trawler Wanda Dene which had radioed it was breaking up in 10-foot seas some 60 miles southwest of Key West.

The copter's crew bucked the 20-knot winds and finally spotted the fishermen. Within minutes the coast guard team had plucked them from their crippled boat.

Safe on dry land again, the eight men relaxed at Key West, Fla., during a refuelling stop, then headed north toward St. Petersburg.

But about 9 p.m. EST, the helicopter ceased communications with its base.

As temperatures dipped to near freezing Sunday morning, two coast guard cutters joined two patrol boats and six airplanes in searching several hundred square miles of coastline between Venice, Fla., and Tampa Bay.

Sunday afternoon one of the airplanes spotted debris floating about 50 miles southwest of here. Ships sped to the scene and verified the wreckage was from the copter.

Thousands Flee

HONG KONG (AP) — An estimated 28,500 persons have escaped from mainland China so far this year, more than at any time since 1962, when an estimated 80,000 fled, reliable sources reported Saturday.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

First Woman Doctor

Recently, it occurred to me that I knew very little about our first modern woman physician, Elizabeth Blackwell, so I was very interested in a book about her life by Dorothy Clarke Wilson, entitled "Lone Woman."

What is remarkable is the struggle that Elizabeth Blackwell had to make, throughout her difficult life, against the pettiness and closed minds of doctors and medical societies.

Elizabeth was born in Bristol, England, in 1821, and her struggle for an education began very early. There was no school available where an intelligent young girl could go to receive a good education, and a boarding school offered her all that was deemed necessary for a young lady of that day. She was taught to read and write a little, to dance, to play music, to paint pictures, and to do some needlework.

In 1846, about the time that anesthesia was discovered, Elizabeth made up her mind fully that she was going to stydy medicine. There followed a most discouraging time when college after college refused to admit her. Finally, in 1847, a little college in Geneva, New York, accepted her. But her troubles were only beginning. She was asked by the professor not to come to lectures on reproduction. When she objected, the question was put to the class, and they voted to allow her to come and listen.

The life of Dr. Blackwell was never easy, but she felt that she had achieved a great triumph when the medical council in England registered her as a physician. Later, she was invited to England to do what she had done for American women, in her fearless battle against some of the most virulent social evils.

When Elizabeth died, shortly before she was 90, some of the doors that had been closed to her as an intelligent young woman were opened, and she had served as an inspiration to many Victorian women who were uncomfortable and unhappy with the limitations and prejudices expressed by society.

U.S. Moves to Halt 'Ideological Plugola'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration has drafted legislation to hold local television stations accountable at licence renewal time for the balance and taste of all network news and entertainment programs they broadcast, a White House official said today.

Clay Whitehead, director of the White House office of telecommunications policy, disclosed the action as he spoke of bias and "ideological plugola" in network news reporting.

Whitehead is the ranking White House official in the broadcast field. His comments, made in a speech prepared for an Indianapolis meeting of the professional journalism society, Sigma Delta Chi, could renew the controversy begun with Vice-President Spiro Agnew's attack on the networks.

In a brief interview before he flew to Indiana, Whitehead said the legislation drafted by his office is not intended as a vindictive assault on the networks but rather is designed to force broadcast executives to take more responsibility for what is beamed into U.S. homes.

The measure would require a broadcaster, to get his licence renewal by the Federal Communications Commission, to "show that he has afforded reasonable, realistic and practical opportunities for the presentation and discussion of conflicting views on controversial issues."

Sources said the draft bill now is before the office of management and budget which collects comments from federal agencies involved.

They said the fact that Whitehead was discussing it publicly seemed to signal its introduction in Congress early next year.

Elaborating on the balanced news criteria, Whitehead said in his speech:

"When there are only a few sources of national news on television, as we now have, editorial responsibility must be exercised more effectively by local broadcasters and by network management. . . ."

"Station managers and network officials who fail to act to correct imbalance or consistent bias in the networks—or who acquiesce by silence—can only be considered willing participants, to be held fully accountable . . . at licence renewal time."

Ham Picks Up Drug Help Plea

MONTREAL (CP) — An Air France jet is scheduled to leave Montreal tonight with a month's suppply of the drug d-penicilamine for a Moroccan child in a Casablanca hospital after a Montreal ham operator picked up a distress call Friday night.

Guy Bourgie was operating his radio in his home when he picked up the call from Casablanca appealing for the drug needed to aid a child suffering from Wilson's disease, a severe liver ailment.

"Apparently they don't have a good supply of the drug in Morocco and the guy who had been contacted by the hospital was trying to find anyone in Canada or the United States," said Mr. Bourgie.

"The contact was so bad we had to speak through a third party in Dakar, Senegal. We've talked twice since to arrange the pick-up and each time it was through the Senegal contact."

Bourgie said the child would apparently live only two weeks without the drug.

He contacted the Red Cross here and arrangements were made for shipment of the drug to Paris where it will be picked up by a Royal Air Maroc special military plane and flown to Casablanca.

"It's the first time I've ever had anything like this happen," he said. "I just hope I can help the child."

Minor Quake Shakes Town

BUCKINGHAM, Que. (CP) — No damage was reported as a minor tremor Saturday rocked this small community 35 miles northeast of Ottawa.

It was the second tremor to shake the community in the last year.

Large Spill Closes Oil Plant

SEATTLE (AP) — The Standard Oil pumping station on the Quinault River near Grays Harbor was closed today following discovery of what the U.S. coast guard termed a "substantial" oil spill.

The spill was discovered Saturday afternoon and a slick extending 20 to 30 feet into the river was rapidly dispersed down stream by a seven to eight-knot current, a spokesman said.

The river is a spawning ground for steelhead and an investigation is under way to determine possible damage to marine life.

The coast guard spokesman said the amount of oil spilled is not known.

The station will be closed until an investigation to pinpoint the leak is completed.

Cars Crash, Seven Die

FORT MACLEOD, Alta. (CP) — Seven persons, including four members of one family, were killed Saturday night when two cars collided near this community, about 90 miles south of Calgary.

The RCMP said one of the vehicles "struck head on into the right broadside" of the other, killing the lone occupant of one car and six of the seven people in the other.

The victims were identified as Robert Ross Campbell, 47, of Lethbridge; Ada Fox, 32, of the Blood Indian reserve; her three daughters, Becky, 9, Carrie, 15, Lucinda, 11; and the mother-in-law and father-in-law of Mrs. Fox, Henry and Louise Standing Alone, 79 and 71.

Mrs. Fox's niece, Byrde Standing Alone, 7, was in good condition in hospital.

The RCMP worked for 90 minutes to free the victims from the wreckage.

Crop Aid Plans Lashed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three Peace River politicians Sunday criticized federal and provincial handling of crop aid to northeastern British Columbia farmers, hit hard this year by crop losses.

Don Phillips, Social Credit MLA for Peace River South, said in an interview agricultural affairs are being run by "lame duck agriculture ministers who don't really want their jobs."

Phillips labelled B.C. Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich as inexperienced for delaying disaster compensation payments so that now they will not get to farmers until after Christmas.

"I told him to settle now and deal with Ottawa later," Phillips said. "His inexperience shows when he thinks he can get more from the federal government if he negotiates in advance. But that's what we can expect from an agriculture minister who really wants to be the finance minister."

Frank Oberle, Liberal MP for Prince George - Peace River, attacked newly - appointed federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, who is "dragging his feet" in announcing federal assistance.

And Ed Smith, Social Credit MLA for Peace River North, took on both levels of government, saying he wants to see an end to "the continued stall" in making payments.

No indication of how much compensation will be paid has been made, but Ian Crane, provincial crop insurance administrator, said it will depend on how much Ottawa kicks in.

Planes Circle

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two passenger planes were forced to circle Vancouver International Airport before landing Sunday when panel lights indicated the landing gear had not lowered properly.

Both planes landed without incident after ground crews visually confirmed that the landing gear was functioning.

An Air Canada DC9, carrying 89 passengers and a crew of five, circled the airport for about an hour. The plane was on flight 275 from Winnipeg, Saskatoon and Edmonton.

Later in the day, CP Air flight 83 from Montreal and Edmonton ran into the same problem. The CP Air plane was carrying 59 passengers and a crew of six.

Abbotsford Votes

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — The district of Abbotsford held its first municipal election Saturday and only 31 per cent of the 3,391 eligible voters turned out to elect six aldermen and one school trustee.

Elected to council for two-year terms are Jack Hougen, 975 votes; Vic Wiebe, 892; Victor Tessaro, 719. One-year terms will be served by George Gough, 707 votes; Theodore Galleitz, 694, and Leonard Saxbee, 685.

For the one position on the Abbotsford school board, Douglas Hamilton was re-elected with 844 votes.

There was no mayoralty race. George Ferguson was elected by acclamation.

Relief for B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Disaster Relief Fund will grant $250,000 toward assisting flood victims in British Columbia this year, says fund spokesman Harold Foley. He said the organization stepped in to "represent the voluntary contributions which would undoubtedly have been made had effective public appeals been feasible." Total damage done by floods in B.C. this year has been estimated at more than $7.5 million.

Candidate Found

VANCOUVER (CP) — Agnes Kripps, president of the women's auxiliary of the British Columbia Social Credit League, said she has a candidate for the party leadership, but she won't name him now.

Kids on Campus: Eye-Opening

Coiling boa charms Brad Cameron

By ANN DUNSMUIR
Times Staff

Everyone except the electric eel had a great time at the University of Victoria Sunday.

The eel gave so many "shocking" performances for specially invited elementary school students and their parents that he had to take a rest to recharge his batteries.

The day was planned to give 300 students, chosen by their teachers, a glimpse of the variety of opportunities available at the university.

The children made prints, talked to a computer that told them their weight on the moon and played with Elizabeth the boa constrictor.

The most popular demonstrations were print making, glass blowing and Dr. George Beer's helium experiment.

Hilarious

Children were invited to empty their lungs, take a deep breath of helium and speak into a microphone. The effect on the voice was dramatic and hilarious. Nearly everybody sounded like Tiny Tim.

One nine-year-old became something of a helium break —he went back so often he got dizzy and had to lie down.

The other Grade 5 students boasted that they had acquired laser burns when the instructor's back was turned. They couldn't wait to get to school and show off to classmates.

Sophisticated

Parents were enthusiastic about everything except the play. Most had to drag their children to the performance. The kids were having too much fun with paints, iguana lizards, sound waves, electronic pianos and television cameras to want to sit still for a play.

And, the play, in the opinion of one mother, was too sophisticated for the audience.

Mrs. Celine Taylor said the performance of the mediaeval miracle play was "too long and not suitable for this age group." Despite this one drawback she thinks the special program for elementary school students is a "great idea."

"They will have some idea of what is available at a university," Mrs. Taylor said.

"When I went to university, students took whatever they were best at in high school. They had no idea of the variety of courses offered."

The program, described by director of admissions Ron Jeffels as "a pilot scheme" may be the first of many. The university hopes to hold a series of Saturday programs for secondary school students.

"The role of the university is changing," Jeffels said. "We have to bring the resources and services of the university to the public on a broad front. We shouldn't just serve 18 to 20-year-olds."

One member of faculty both agrees and disagrees. He is all for showing kids what the university is all about, but he has reservations about the children chosen for the program.

"The choice was left to teachers," he said. "And they nearly always pick the bright kids who are doing well — the kind who will make it to university anyway."

He would like to see UVic entertain students who don't see much point to school work, but who might "catch fire" if they realized that all those lessons led somewhere.

Got Message

At least one father — a civil servant — got the message.

He watched an enthusiastic biologist do his thing and said: "It must be great to spend your time doing something you love and being paid for it."

Tests Improve Cosmetic Safety

NEW YORK (UPI) — The cosmetics you use today are safer than were their counterparts 10 years ago — and it's not necessarily because consumers are on the warpath.

Robert L. Goldemberg, president of the Society of Cosmetic Chemists, made that point in an interview at the society's annual scientific meeting in New York.

The improved safety is due to almost endless testing for everything from edibility (in case little kids munch the cold cream or lipstick) to allergic reactions.

Goldemberg said a manufacturer can't be in business today without extensive testing — "for moral and survival reasons."

Moral in this case means a maker doesn't want to hurt anyone with his products. And survival means if a batch of perfume — put out in say 10 million bottles per vat — causes a rash in one or a couple of persons, your company's liable to fall on its face. Word of such a rash travels among consumers like a — well, like a rash.

Goldemberg's society has about 2,000 members. They work for all the people who make soup, nice smelling furniture polish, cosmetics, hair sprays and even makers of candles that give off flavored scents. The chemists are the ones who compound the magic formulas.

The recipes for such things aren't held as closely to the vest as they were in an earlier era. This is due to the Food and Drug Administration request that makers of the tons of things Americans pat, rub, draw, spray and brush on themselves be made of things the FDA knows about.

This stems from the need for quick action in case of allergic reaction or ingestion by a child. Goldemberg said more than 500 manufacturers have complied with the request.

The cosmetics industry is heavily regulated by the FDA, mostly in the area of safety. Goldemberg said that the more sophisticated testing that marks the industry today isn't particularly due to the ever watchful eye of the FDA.

No more so than it is due to the consumer movement.

Goldemberg said the increase in testing started to pick up at least 10 years ago, long before consumerism became a movement.

He is technical director of Van Dyk and Co., in Belleville, N.J. The firm supplies raw materials such as emulsifiers, sunscreens, perfume compounds and such.

Goldemberg said the firm is a small one but that it has formulated about 9,000 scents for perfumes, candles, and such.

"The young (youth) market is high on scents," he said. "On everything from soaps, oils to incense and candles. They're not buying bath oil for the benefit to the skin but more for the fragrance."

The high on fragrances applies to young males as well as young females.

"They want impact," Goldemberg said, through the olfactory system.

Testing of cosmetics involves humans and animals. Rats are used for oral toxicity. This is to make reasonable sure junior won't kill himself when he eats your cold cream or eye shadow.

Rabbits are used for tests related to eye irritation. Cosmetics aren't supposed to go into the eye area but sometimes they do by accident.

Guinea pigs with shaved backs are used to test for allergic reactions.

The big trade journals of the cosmetics industry, free to scientists attending the meeting, in reports from Washington showed that the eye is ever on what's happening at the regulatory agency, the FDA. The agency, for example, expects the cosmetic makers to report to Washington when it receives notice of an adverse reaction in a person using that firm's product.

But the FDA isn't all the cosmetic people need watch. They must keep one eye peeled for research sponsored by the government.

Consider this report in one of the cosmetics journals distributed at the meeting:

"The national institute for occupational safety and health, Rockville, MD., has commissioned a study of Connecticut cosmetologists to evaluate the risk of long-term use of hair sprays, especially whether such use can be a factor in malignancies in the lymphatic system and the bladder and cardiac and respiratory diseases."

SINGLE HOMES ON INCREASE

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 800,000 Canadians lived by themselves last year in selfcontained dwelling units, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

The statistics bureau said the figure, which does not include roomers or boarders in private homes, lodging houses or institutions, accounted for 13.4 per cent of the six million households in Canada and nearly four per cent of the total population.

In 1966 there were about 590,000 one-person households, accounting for 11.4 per cent of all households, and in 1961 there were fewer than 425,000 or about 9.3 per cent.

The 1971 figure is based on information gathered in the national census that covered all households.

The census identified a total of five million families in the country, 30 per cent of whom had no children under 25 living at home.

At the other extreme, 47,550 families, about one per cent, had eight children or more.

Families with one or two children accounted for 55 per cent of all families while the balance had four to seven children living at home.

Newfoundland had the highest proportion of families with eight or more children — 4,300 or about four per cent of the provincial total. It also had the lowest proportion of one-person households with just under six per cent, or less than half of the national average.

The average number of children per family dropped to 1.7 in 1971 from 1.9 in both 1966 and 1961.

Atlantic provinces families were larger than in any other area of the country other than the Yukon or Northwest Territories, averaging 1.9 children, but down from the 2.2 average recorded in both 1966 and 1961.

Families in Ontario and the western provinces each reported the same average number of children as in 1961, but slightly below the 1966 figure.

The breakdown ranged from 1.8 children per family in Alberta and Saskatchewan to 1.6 in Ontario and B.C.

Sports Participation Program To Encourage Canadian Fitness

OTTAWA (CP) — Sports Participation Canada, a private agency devoted to promoting the idea of fitness, hopes to motivate 3,500,000 Canadians to take up regular exercising by 1976, its director general Keith McKerracher said Wednesday.

McKerracher told the national conference on health and fitness that only 400,000 Canadians now have a regular program of exercising.

Within a year, Canadians won't be able to light their cigarettes, put sugar in their tea or coffee or even have a glass of milk without being reminded of the need for exercise, he said.

The Eddy Match Co. will be printing almost 20 million match boxes containing fitness messages. St. Lawrence Sugar will distribute millions of sugar packages in restaurants with the same messages. A number of dairies also will put the messages on their milk cartons.

To get Canadians away from their television sets or off the grandstand and onto the playing field, the motivation may be the fear of dying, the fun of playing with others or the hope of a better sex life, said McKerracher.

One of his hopes is to film a 60 second commercial for TV that would allow viewers to take a fitness test in their own living room.

If he had his way, he added, everyone who took the test would fail it.

McKerracher said he had picked up dozens of ideas at the conference for motivating Canadians to exercise. For example he had learned of poor physical education in some Canadian schools; of an increase in obesity in children and the fact that their physical condition deteriorates when they begin school.

In recommendations passed at 17 workshops set up during the conference, delegates urged all levels of government to continue to support a marketing campaign for physical fitness.

Fitness evaluation centres should be established across the country to provide information and the resources needed for fitness programs both for normal people as well as coronary patients.

Higher priority should be given to physical eduation programs in schools and "both the quality and quantity of physical activity programs in the educational process must be fostered."

The federal government should start the development of a plan to assure that needed recreation services were available to all Canadians.

FORCES JOBS FOR WOMEN SOUGHT

If Lt.-Col. Mary Vallance has her way the day may soon come when the Admiral is a lady.

For the past year Miss Vallance, adviser and consultant on plans and policies for servicewomen for the department of national defence, has been studying job categories in the Canadian forces in order to open to women careers now reserved for men.

She visited CFB Esquimalt Friday on her annual tour of Canadian forces bases.

Her study was undertaken to find ways of implementing the recommendations in the Report of the Royal Commission on the status of women. The report urged that all job categories in the services be opened to women.

Although the defence department reacted positively to the commission's recommendations, the Defence Council still has reservations about the suitability of some suggestions.

"The commission recommended that women be admitted to military colleges and allowed to serve at sea," Miss Vallance said.

She said the Defence Council ruled that women should not attend military colleges nor "serve in combat, near combat or at sea."

Miss Vallance said her study covered each trade "in great detail" and then asked headquarters to pinpoint career areas restricted to male personnel and justify the reasons for excluding women.

In some cases she found the restriction reasonable. "I thought the postal trade would be a good job for women until I found out it involved the lifting of 60 pound bags of mail many times a day."

Miss Vallance hopes to see the number of women in the forces increase from 2 per cent to 8 per cent in the next 10 years, although the size of the armed forces will not be increased.

VALLANCE
. . . more careers

"We're taking jobs from men. Not adding jobs," Miss Vallance said.

She pointed out that a girl entering the Canadian forces today can expect to be trained in a career and promoted on her merit. "A woman officer will command both men and women," she said.

Women personnel receive the same salaries and benefits as servicemen. A woman joining the forces should be less than 35 years of age if she is officer material, 18-29 years of age if unskilled or 18 to 34 years of age if skilled.

New job categories now open to women include: air traffic control, communications and electronic engineer, aerospace engineer, air weapons conroller, safety systems technician, drafting and bio-sciences technician.

Christmas Past

At the annual Christmas dinner held by Victoria Branch of the B.C. Historical Society, Gerald Wellburn, long-time resident here and in the Duncan area, was guest speaker.

He chose to reminisce about Christmasses past —one in England before the Wellburn family emigrated to Canada and another in Victoria when they first arrived here in 1911.

The second Christmas evoked so many memories amongst those present at the dinner, I gained Gerry's consent to print some of that story in this column.

The Wellburn family, mother and five children, arrived in Victoria on April 2, 1911, their father having preceded them almost a year before.

Those youngsters were Molly (now Mrs. C. Foxall), Gerry, Gracie (Mrs. M. Knight), Tom and Kathie (Mrs. J. Richardson).

The home they went to was on Grant Street, off Fernwood Road (Mrs. Knight is still living there), and the children with the exception of little Kathie started school at Boys and Girls Central. Later they all went to the New Victoria High School, opened in 1915.

By the time Christmas came along that year of 1911 Gerry said "we were oriented to the change from England to Victoria, although life-long friends and relatives hadn't quite been replaced as we learned a new Canadian way of life."

They were "almost staggered," he remembered, with the luxury that appeared everywhere in Victoria.

"Electric lights in houses . . . occasionally a telephone in a private home . . . and children allowed to stay up later at night, probably due to the electric lights."

The Wellburns had been brought up to go to bed early in England and to undress by candle light.

People moved more quickly, too, "and as long as you watched out for the clanging street cars, you could safely jaywalk and cross the streets anywhere."

Each Saturday night was "as thrilling as an annual fair." Street cars poured shoppers downtown and into the stores on Government, Douglas and Fort Streets and into some of the fine newer stores on Yates Street.

View Street from Broad Street west, and a block along Government were still fronted with temporary wooden shops after the big Five Sisters Block fire of 1910.

As Christmas drew near, the stores became even more exciting, according to Wellburn memories. Goodacre's butcher shop hung out rows of turkeys and geese with ruffles around their necks. Pat Burns put a suckling pig in the window with an apple in its mouth. Dan Poupard's was heaped up with baskets of fruit and Lilley's with mountains of candies.

Copas and Young and the West End Grocery were loaded with boxes of bonbons and fancy Christmas foods. The Dixi Ross store shone and glistened with bottles of "good cheer" all beribboned and cradled in baskets.

"It was all simply gorgeous," Gerry said, "and to cap it there was the 5, 10 and 15 cent store, a whole world of never-ending wonder . . . we had never imagined anything as luxurious as Victoria!"

Christmas at the Wellburn's home was what Gerry called a marathon celebration.

"Our mother was a tremendous cook. Mince pies, Christmas cakes, cheese straws, jam tarts, Simmel cake, all seemed to flow on an assembly line from her wood-fired Monarch kitchen range. To a boy the house just reeked of fascinating smells."

"Moreover our mother was a craftsman with her needle, scissors and paste brush. And she kept her children busy helping her make scrap books, Christmas garlands, paper chains, snakes and other decorations."

Because Father Wellburn's birthday was on New Year's Day and Gerry's on January 9, "the routine didn't just stop with Christmas. Rather it extended over nearly two weeks of gastronomic activity."

"There was a plum pudding with holly on top and flaming in a dash of brandy on New Year's Day and another one on my birthday," Gerry reminisced.

"That day we were also cautioned to go easy on the walnut fudge as that was all we would get until next Christmas."

On Wednesday in this column you will read more about the Wellburns and their first Christmas day in Victoria.

Nixon Promise Recalled

LA PAZ, BOLIVIA (UPI) — Twin Bolivian girls, now 18 and graduated from high school, are basing their hopes for a college education on a promise their mother says President Nixon made to her almost 15 years ago.

Judith and Ruth Leonardini were three years old when their mother, Haidee, took them to see Nixon during a stopover he made here on his 1958 tour of Latin America.

Nixon, then vice-president in the Eisenhower Administration, noticed the little twins as he walked past them and their mother. He stopped, picked up the girls, and spoke with the mother. A photographer snapped a picture of Nixon holding the twins.

Mrs. Leonardini said Nixon promised her in their brief meeting that, when the twins had graduated from high school, he would see to it that they obtained scholarships to go on to college in the U.S.

"Our mother has always reminded us of President Nixon's promise," said Ruth in a recent interview.

"Ever since then, we've been planning to study in the United States," said Judith.

To keep the promise alive, the picture of Nixon holding Judith and Ruth is prominently displayed in the four-room Leonardini house in the lower middle-class neighborhood of "La Bandera" in northeastern La Paz.

The picture was a gift from the U.S. ambassador to Bolivia at the time of Nixon's visit, Phillip Bonsal.

Since then, Judith and Ruth have gone through school together and on Nov. 23 they graduated from the La Paz institute, the equivalent of a U.S. high school that stresses business courses. Judith had the best grades in her graduating class, and Ruth also ranked among the top five students in the class.

Judith would like to go on to study medicine, and Ruth is interested in sociology. Both said Nixon's promise in 1958 is their only hope of continuing their educations.

Their father, Julian, 52, earns the equivalent of $75 per month from his job in a jewelery shop. They have a young brother, Pedro, 14, and another sister, Sofia, still at home.

The Leonardini family followed the progress of the U.S. presidential campaign as best they could this year in Bolivian newspapers. They were overjoyed when Nixon won a second term.

"We hoped his re-election would make it easier for us to get a scholarship," Judith said as Ruth nodded her head in agreement.

The family has heard nothing further from Nixon since that memorable day in 1958, a Tuesday, May 6, Mrs. Leonardini recalled. But Mariano Baptista, editor of the La Paz newspaper Ultima Hora, was familiar with the incident and earlier this week brought it to the attention of U.S. Ambassador Ernest Siracusa and asked him to follow up on it.

"The next word is up to president Nixon," said Mrs. Leonardini. "I, hope he remembers and keeps his promise."

YATES HILLSIDE

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote that she sold kisses at a carnival last summer to raise money for a local charity, and she couldn't forget the way one stranger had kissed her. (She said, "He wasn't much to look at, but wow, could that man kiss!") Then she wanted to know if it was possible for a man to thrill a woman so much without feeling anything himself.

You replied, "I hate to destroy your illusions, but it is possible for a kiss to be a one-way proposition."

As one who has played the male lead in more movies than you would believe, I can verify your statement. I have "thrilled" many beautiful—but foul smelling movie actresses with my kisses, and have gotten nothing out of it but nauseated. Some were chronic garlic and onion eaters. Others seldom bathed, but used great quantities of perfume, instead.

If you print this, please withhold my name. I am up in years now, but am still remembered by man.—AGING ACTOR.

DEAR ACTOR: Your secret is safe with me. The only thing worse than a man who kisses and tells is a woman who kisses and smells!

DEAR ABBY: I am a 30-year-old married man. I've been married for 10 years and have two children. My wife and K have very little in common other than our children.

My problem is my sex life. (Or perhaps I should say the lack of it.) My wife doesn't care for it, except on special occasions. She uses it as a reward for my doing chores around the house. We have relations about once every three or four weeks. I feel cheated and frustrated, and that the best years of my life are slipping away.

Don't suggest a marriage counsellor. We spent two years going to one once a week. It solved nothing. I have considered divorce, but I don't want to give my children up because they are all I have that makes my life worth living. I accept that fact that I am a martyr for them now, but what else can I do?—Depressed Up North.

DEAR DEPRESSED: I suggest you see a therapist. You must either learn to live with your situation without feeling like a "martyr" or extricate yourself from it. Parents who "sacrifice" their lives for their children usually wind up alone and bitter, and the children oftentimes sense the "martyrdom" and feel guilty.

DEAR ABBY: The couple who think they are "in the right" by not paying the $3 they were undercharged by a teen-ager helping at his parents' business are teaching the boy a lesson. A lesson in "Do unto others before they can do unto you."

I wonder if the boy is being docked the $3 from his pay? I also wonder if the couple would feel that the boy was "in the right" if they later discovered that he had accidentally overcharged them $3?

Legal rights are one thing. Human kindness and understanding are others.

Which do you think the boy will remember most?—Disappointed In You.

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Im disappointed in myself. You are right. I should have advised them to pay the additional $3.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are making a success of our marriage, the second for both of us. My son, 14, lives with us. My husband's three boys, age 8 to 14, live with their mother, but occasionally come to visit at our house for several days.

Charity Kisses One-Way Thrill

At their house, the family lives very informally, taking their meals on trays to eat in the den while watching TV. At our house the evening meal is important as a family gathering and it is eaten at the table. When his boys are with us, they often eat quickly and leave the table before others are finished eating. With my own son, I insist that he ask permission to be excused when he leaves the table early. Then he understands that for him the meal is over, and he is not allowed to return to the table when dessert is served.

My questions: Am I hopelessly old-fashioned to stress good table manners? Would I be presumptuous to teach my husband's boys the kind of manners I have taught my own son? Since they seldom eat at a table, perhaps they have not had the opportunity to be critical of their mother's way of bringing them up.

Do you think that while the boys are living with us they should be required to observe the rules of our household? — Puzzled Step-Mother.

DEAR PUZZLED: Absolutely. And no ifs, ands, or buts.

Athletics Aid Mental Health

OTTAWA (CP) — Athletic skills can fulfill a person's need for admiration from others, one of the necessities for mental health, Emma M. Layman, head of the department of psychology at Iowa's Wesleyan College, said today.

Layman's paper on the relation between sports and physical recreation and mental health was delivered at the opening session of the national conference on fitness and health.

She said that boys and men from elementary school to university reaped admiration from others through athletic prowess. This applied to a lesser extent in female athletes as puberty approached.

Layman, author of numerous articles on various aspects of sport psychology, said girls who take part in sports tend to be identified "with the masculine girl, thus down-grading her athletic abilities."

But there were some sports, such as swimming and archery, considered less masculine than others, she noted.

Many female athletes met their need for esteem through approval and admiration for their team-mates, she said.

Layman said a number of conditions must be met, however, if mental health values are to flow from sport and recreation.

1. Fitness programs involving regular exercises, preferably on a daily basis, were required. School programs on a twice-weekly schedule, with children standing or sitting around most of the time, were virtually useless.

2. Programs must stress participation by all, not a select few.

3. Programs should be varied and include activities that could be carried on in later years.

Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener, taking part in the official opening of the conference, said there is evidence Canadians are not as fit as Americans or Europeans. There was no excuse for this.

Joseph Willard, deputy minister of the national health department, cited the governor-general's kickoff in the Grey Cup game and his daily jogging in calling Mr. Michener "the symbol of fitness and health in Canada."

Lassie Came Home —To Spain

MADRID (UPI) — A two-year-old collie arrived in Madrid today from Tampa, Fla., for a Christmas reunion with a heartbroken child whose health had been endangered by grief over their separation.

Four-year-old Vanessa Malendez and her dog, Wa-Wo, were separated in August when her father, U.S. Air Force Capt. Ismael Malendez, was transferred from Tampa to Madrid.

They left the dog behind at the Humane Society, hopeful it could find a good home. But Vanessa mourned the loss of her friend and companion and her grief became progressively worse, raising concern for her health.

It was decided the only answer was to reunite Vanessa and Wa-Wo, so the dog was traced to his new home, where the owners agreed to sell the dog back when they heard about Vanessa.

Today, with all the formalities and transportation problems solved by the Humane Society, Wa-Wo arrived at Madrid airport and one little girl was a whole lot happier.

" 'Mommy, you won't send him away again will you?' were Vanessa's first words on learning the dog had arrived," said her mother, Mrs. Cherly Malendez.

"She's been so very, very happy ever since. It really has made a tremendous change in her.

"Now we're just waiting for a chance to pick him up at the airport. My husband is flying today and my Spanish is not all that good, so we're waiting for him to come down before going to the airport.

"As far as I know there are no quarantine problems. The Humane Society did a marvellous job at arranging everything. They even built a special cage through the night when they found they didn't have one big enough."

Things looked less simple from the other side of the Atlantic. Mrs. Rosemary Shapiro, director of the Humane society, faced possibly lengthy formalities before being able to ship the collie.

Mrs. Lois Noriega and Mrs. Betty Leto, owners of a travel agency, knew the paper work would take time because notarized health papers would have to be sent to the Spanish consul in New York and then returned before the dog could be shipped.

They decided to take a chance and send the dog on to Madrid, noting that the health papers were up to date.

The two women said they think the worst that can happen will be that Capt. Malendez will be fined. But they said they feel the Spanish are compassionate and will allow the reunion.

Farmers Back Land Preservation—With Reservation

The B.C. Federation of Agriculture agrees with the provincial government's farmland preservation policy with one reservation — farmers should be guaranteed a living income before being tied to their land.

This is the main theme of a brief which the federation, representing the majority of B.C. farmers, presented to the cabinet today.

Another request is for the "immediate removal of succession ditues from farmland passing within the family for farm purposes."

The brief follows an announcement by Agriculture Minister David Stupich that the government intends to take steps to preserve farmlands which are being bought at increasing rate for industrial and residential development.

"We regard the whole subject of the preservation of farmland and subsequent responsibilities as being the most important issue our industry has faced for many years," the brief states.

"A large proportion of our members view the issue as being the critically deciding factor in their future — the issue that will decide whether they must leave the family farm or whther they are able to continue in their chosen field," it said.

But the brief points out that it would be unjust to preserve farmlands through zoning and other measures without first ensuring that growers earn a reasonable livelihood.

It points out that prices for farm produce have practically remained the same in the past 10 years.

For example, broiler growers received 22.5 cents per lb. for broiler chicken in 1962, exactly the same price they received in 1972, while during the same period the retail price rose from 39 cents to 59 cents per lb.

"If the farm price of Grade A eggs had kept pace with the price of first class postage stamps over the last twenty years, the consumer price for eggs today would be $1.60 per dozen instead of 60 cents," it states.

"It is against this background that the issue of preservation of farmland must be discussed," he adds.

Locking up farms and leaving farm families to earn a sub-standard living would be unjust, it notes.

Many of the growers hope to pass the family farm on to the next generation, so that it may remain as farmland, it points out.

Otto Faught in his workshop

800 Lamps Later, Otto Still Works

DUNCAN — Otto Faught, 95, finds that working gives him that extra incentive to keep interested in life.

He has been making canes, lamps and burl tables for 45 years, and still works a little each day on projects.

"I get a lot of pleasure out of it," he said. "It gives me incentive. To keep doing things is one of the objects in life."

Faught goes to the senior citizens' centre here for his daily game of cards. He has supplied many of the members with one of his hand-made canes.

Faught said he started making willow canes while he was farming his 320 acres in Alberta. "I gave them all away," he said.

Fifteen years later he started making lamps and 10 years ago he started on burl tables.

Since his first cane Faught said it has been his favorite pastime to wander the beaches and woods looking for ideal pieces of wood to make his table or floor lamps.

Faught has made over 800 lamps and about 50 burl tables. He has lost count of the canes.

Glass Bowl Garden Last-Minute Gift

You won't produce a masterpiece with one hour's work, but I'll wager the result will please you as much as the prospective recipient.

The project is a last-minute making of a glass bowl garden as a special gift.

Now that snow has gone, rosettes of Sempervivums and Saxafrages can be seen in crevices of the rock garden. They are easily detachable with a few roots and no disturbance of the remainder of the planting. One large and two small rosettes are enough for a small bowl.

In the bottom of the goldfish bowl, or other clear glass container which can be closed with a glass lid or stopper, put an inch of stones and small charcoal pieces.

On top, arrange two pieces of similar rock, placing them to form a crevice. Into the crevice, and using a funnel, pour a mixture of sand, and screened soil, mostly leafmould.

Don't fill the crevice, for the roots of the plants must go down into the crevice and then have the mixture pressed around the roots.

As described in the goldfish bowl garden article earlier, long handled pushing and holding tools aid in the setting of plants without soiling the sides of the container. Watering gently, either by means of the long necked funnel or with a mist spray, also aids settling of the soil.

Small stones, patiently spread around the plants will cover the soil, making a believable little rock garden.

Don't use too much water for this type of plant, since there will be no loss by evaporation, and soft growth must be avoided.

None of the three S's of the rock garden, Sempervivum, Sedum or Saxafraga, wants a constantly moist soil. Use as little water as ensures the soil being in contact with the plant roots down in the crevice. No further watering will be needed for a year or more.

Living gardens in bottles and other covered glass containers have a future as surely as they have a past.

Nathaniel Ward, English physician and scientist of the early 19th century, originated the Wardian case for bringing living plants back to England from plant hunting expeditions on sailing vessels taking months for trips.

Ward also found that certain rare seeds which would not survive the long journeys in a dormant state, could be sown in closed glass cases, germinate and reach plant size before arrival in Britain.

It is believed that bottle gardening developed as a refinement of these more utilitarian cases, which were nevertheless widely used in Victorian drawing rooms for living plants.

Today's apartments call in no uncertain voice for living plants, yet the environment limits their use. Closed glass containers are the answer for many people.

By making a gift of one to a friend now, you may re-introduce a living garden into the lives of many who will enjoy it.

SOLUTION TUESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

When today's deal arose in a recent team-of-four match, the first South declarer to play the hand arrived at a game contract in a solid trump suit. He went down to defeat, owing to circumstances beyond his control. When the deal was replayed, our new South declarer played the hand in a "broken down" eight-card trump suit. He fulfilled his contract despite the fact that the opponents put up the best possible defence.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♣.

Upon winning the opening lead with his club ace, West continud with another club, South's ruffing East's jack. Declarer now cashed his four top trumps, gathering in the adversely-held pieces, and leaving himself with just one trump.

He next led a low spade, and dummy's jack won the trick. On a spade return, East discarded a diamond, and South put up his queen. West allowed the queen to win.

A low spade was then led by South, and West took the trick with his ten-spot. A third club lead was now made by West, and South ruffed with his last trump. All South made were two spades, six trumps, and the diamond ace, to incur a one-trick set.

When the deal was replayed, our new South declarer arrived at a four-spade contract. The West defender also opened the ace of clubs, as his counterpart had done against the four-heart contract. He then continued with another club, which South ruffed.

Declarer then led a low spade to dummy's jack, which won the trick. Another spade was returned, South putting up his queen. West could not gain by refusing to capture the queen, so he won the trick with his ace. He played back a third club, which was ruffed with dummy's remaining trump (no other return by West could have altered the outcome).

Declarer next returned to the South hand via the heart ace, and cashed the king of spades. At this point, South had a low trump remaining, while West possessed the high ten-spot. Declarer now played his high hearts, and all West could make was his ten of trumps.

Thus, at the four-spade contract, declarer's only losers were two trump tricks and one club. All of which seems to indicate that one should select an eight-card major suit as his trump suit.

"Wow!" exclaimed Sally when her husband came in. "New shoes, new tie, new shirt. They didn't come for free."

Mike grinned. "Only thirty-three bucks the lot," he told her. "the shoes cost twice as much as the shirt and tie together, and the shirt just a third as much as the tie and shoes togetyher."

Extras Made It a Stowaway Cruise

PENDENNIS CASTLE (AP) — The family of four did it out of desperation. The London lad did it "cause I wanted to see my mum for Christmas."

There were so many stowaways aboard the Royal Mail Ship Pendennis Castle as she neared Southampton today that passengers were calling it the "stowaway cruise."

"There's enough of us to form a club," said James White, 35, of Glasgow, caught with his wife and two small sons in the crew's quarters 10 hours after the ship left Cape Town Dec. 6.

"We were desperate," said Mrs. White. "We'd emigrated to South Africa, but my husband could not find work and wages were too low.

"We tried for six months. I sold off all my rings and jewelry, but we couldn't even afford school uniforms for the two boys so they ran around the beach all day."

Christina Lee Shea, 22, of Albany, N.Y., stowed away on the spur of the moment.

"I was seeing off a friend in Las Palmas, and suddenly I thought it would be a kicky thing to do," she said. "I mean I had no money but it would be an adventure. I expected to get caught."

Miss Shea is a sociology graduate from the State University of New York at Albany. She was doing graduate work at the University of Stockholm before she went to the Canary Islands for a vacation and ran out of money.

Paul Michael Ford, 22, of London was a steward on a ship of the Peninsular and Oriental Line, but he jumped ship in Durban because they cut overtime. "It was going to be a seven-month cruise with no way to make any extra pounds, and I wanted to see my mum for Christmas."

Ford made his way to Cape Town and boarded the Pendennis Castle a few hours before she sailed.

Relatives of Ford and the White family promised the company they would pay their passage, and the five were given cabins and free run of the ship. Miss Shea couldn't come up with any relatives or money, and she and her three-year-old child were confined to the hospital isolation ward.

New Buses Next Summer For Victoria Fringes

Outlying areas of Victoria will get better bus service sooner as a result of an order for 99 B.C. Hydro buses being split between two competing companies.

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said Friday 60 of the buses will be supplied by Western Flyer of Winnipeg and 39 by General Motors in London, Ont.

The $45,000 buses will be delivered throughout 1973, bringing fuller service by summer instead of by fall as originally planned, Lorimer hopes.

The buses will also be used by B.C. Hydro to service Coquitlam, Surrey, Port Moody, Richmond and Delta.

Flyer president Thomas J. Ault said in Winnipeg that his company underbid General Motors to get the order for 60 buses.

Ice Marooned Island Cottage

TORONTO (CP) — After 25 days stranded on an island cottage in the Severn River, James Harold Turner, 45, dined Sunday night on half a roast chicken.

The Toronto resident had survived since Nov. 22 on a soup made from six onions, four potatoes, some tea bags and "at least 24 gallons of water." He was found Saturday by Clarence Marshall, a 63-year-old trapper who tramped five miles on snowshoes to the ice-bound cottage.

Mr. Turner had gone to his brother's cottage by boat Nov. 22 to close it for the winter but could not leave the next day because the river had frozen over.

"It's nothing beside what sometimes happens up north," Mr. Turner, an unemployed laborer, said Monday.

He said he knew it was just a matter of waiting until the ice broke up. The cottage gave him shelter and he kept busy chopping wood for fuel as well as keeping electric heaters going. He made one attempt to get out overland and went about seven miles before returning to the cottage exhausted.

Mr. Marshall said he found Mr. Turner huddled with four small electric stoves and smoking rolled-up leaves.

"I didn't really think I was going to find any one," Mr. Marshall said, "so I only packed a light lunch...

"But he certainly gobbled up my lettuce sandwiches and a package of candy I had."

TOO WEAK TO WALK

Mr. Turner said he thought the trapper would return with some snowshoes so he could walk across the frozen river, but Mr. Marshall said: "When I got there he was too weak to come out with me; I went back and told the provincial police."

Provincial police told the armed forces and an air-sea search and rescue helicopter from Uplands airport near Ottawa picked up Mr. Turner and flew him to Severn Falls.

"They are a very efficient organization," he said. "They had me out of there in five minutes."

He began his cure for a 15-pound weight loss with three bowls of onion soup at the Severn Falls restaurant of Jim and Margaret Kirby.

"Thank God Clarence was able to get over there and reach him," said Mrs. Kirby. "We thought he was back in Toronto and just forgot to say goodbye."

She said she did not think he could have survived much longer.

Mr. Turner returned to Toronto Sunday and enjoyed his first real meal in weeks at his brother's house.

Hotel Blaze Claims Three

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — Fire raged through a three-storey brick hotel in downtown Missoula early today, and firemen said they believe at least three persons died in the flames.

A number of elderly persons and transients lived in the Preiss Hotel, police said, but they had no estimate of the number of guests registered during the weekend.

One wall of the hotel collapsed, cutting a power line and leaving a section of the business district without power.

SMUGGLING NOT WORTH RISK SAYS FREED CANADIAN GIRL

TORONTO (CP) — Susan Hodgins, free after 4½ months in a cramped, cold Lebanese prison, flew home to Toronto Sunday night for a warm, happy reunion with her family.

Miss Hodgins, 22, was acquitted Saturday in Beirut on a charge of smuggling hashish.

But even as she rejoiced in being set from her tomb-like cell after her long ordeal, she was thinking of other young tourists who may find themselves in the same predical ment.

"Warn them—anyone going over there—make them aware so they are not foolish enough to try and take hashish out," she said in an interview. "No matter how easy some think it is, no matter how many friends say they have done it, it's not worth it."

She said drug sentences run between three and 15 years in Lebanon, whose prisons make those in Canada seem luxurious by comparison.

Prisoners have no beds or mattresses. The cells are steaming hot in summer, but by November, she said, the night chill makes the buildings seem "like a tomb."

Miss Hodgins, a student at the University of British Columbia, was detained at Beirut airport after security men said they found 7.7 pounds of hashish in a false bottom of her suitcase.

After she was jailed, she wrote a letter to an English-language newspaper in Beirut, swearing her innocence and pleading with President Soliman Frangie of Lebanon to free her.

She said she had met and fallen in love with a handsome young Lebanese while she was there. She claimed he gave her his suitcase when she damaged her own and told her they would meet again in Amsterdam. Her plane was preparing for take-off when it was stopped by police who found the hashish.

NFB Film Ban Lifted

MONTREAL (CP) — Controversial opinions which caused the National Film Board to cancel a documentary will be expressed more explicitly in a revised version of the film, says director Gilles Groulx.

He said in an interview Sunday nothing will be deleted from the film but a statement of its purpose will be added at the end of the documentary.

Government film commissioner Sidney Newman cancelled Vingt-Quatre Heures ou plus—Twenty Four Hours or More—earlier this month because it "advocated the overthrow of the entire political and economic system as it operates in Canada."

Mr. Groux said Sunday a statement would be added at the end of the film, making it clear that the film is a testament against exploitation and that "to live according to our real needs, we believe that we must overthrow the capitalist system and establish the new society."

The first version of the film alluded only to the necessity of overthrowing capitalism.

Mr. Groulx said Mr. Newman's decision to allow the film to be completed resulted from public outcry against its cancellation.

ESKIMO BOY CITED FOR BRAVERY AWARD

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — David Kootook, the 14-year-old Eskimo boy credited with saving the life of pilot Martin Hartwell, has been nominated for the commissioner's award for bravery.

A final decision will be made after an inquest into the Nov. 8 crash, in which three persons died.

Denmark Bans Salmon Fishing

COPENHAGEN (AP) — The Danish parliament has narrowly approved an international agreement halting all high seas salmon fisheries off west Greenland by 1976.

Opponents charged the government with selling out national interests and the freedom of the seas as a result of economic pressure by the United States.

The vote was 89 to 75 with 10 abstaining as the Social-Democratic government, in a race to meet a Dec. 23 ratification deadline, won its long battle for the salmon bill on the last day before the Christmas recess.

The bill provided the legal basis for Denmark to accept an agreement of the International Commission for North Atlantic Fisheries to phase out the Greenland salmon fisheries over a four-year period.

A dozen opposition members were finally prompted to vote for the salmon bill by fresh reports from Danish embassies in Washington and London warning against repercussions in case of a rejection of the bill.

Government speakers noted that Danish fish exports worth about $30 million could be at stake. The U.S. had threatened to restrict the import of Danish fish products.

Angry opponents insisted there is no conclusive scientific evidence that the Greenland salmon catchers are depleting the stock. They declared the agreement is tantamount to accepting the principle of national ownership of fish in the high seas.

U.S. Again Bombs North

WASHINGTON (CP)—The United States has resumed full-scale bombing of North Vietnam and will continue until Hanoi agrees to a settlement of the war, the White House announced today.

The White House said President Nixon ordered the resumption of bombing of North Vietnam "to cope with another enemy buildup" and forestall a possible Communist offensive.

Presidential press secretary Ronald Ziegler refused to link Nixon's decision to the current stalemate in the peace talks. He said the "road to a negotiated peace is wide open. We want a rapid settlement." (See Kissinger report on Page 3.)

Ziegler said the action is consistent with the policy Nixon outlined in a May 8 speech and said the policy "will continue until such time as a settlement is arrived at . . ."

In a televised speech May 8, Nixon said the full-scale bombing of North Vietnam and the mining of its harbors would continue until there was a ceasefire throughout Indochina and all American prisoners had been released by Hanoi.

Defence Secretary Melvin Laird made the first Washington announcement of the lifting of restrictions.

He told reporters: "Air operations are being conducted throughout North Vietnam at the present time."

Before Laird spoke to reporters, North Vietnam claimed U.S. planes had dropped mines in Haiphong harbor and rocketed suburbs of North Vietnam's chief port.

The United States never did remove minefields from the approaches to seven North Vietnamese harbors, including Haiphong.

Nixon ordered bombing of North Vietnam cut back to the 20th parallel in late October in an apparent gesture aimed at bringing the peace negotiations to a satisfactory conclusion.

His action at the time, in effect spared the most populous area of North Vietnam, including Hanoi and Haiphong, while permitting the U.S. planes to continue attacking North Vietnamese supply movements throughout the less populated North Vietnamese area above South vietnam.

Laird briefly acknowledged the lifting of bombing restrictions on North Vietnam two days after Henry Kissinger, chief U.S. peace negotiator and President Nixon's security adviser, had reported negotiations toward a ceasefire were at an impasse.

Kissinger blamed the North Vietnamese for coming up with what he called "frivolous" proposals and changing their position on issues he felt had been resolved.

Renewal of the air war on Haiphong and Hanoi in an attempt to force North Vietnam to accept U.S. peace terms had been predicted after Kissinger's announcement Saturday that his negotiations with Hanoi's Le Duc Tho had broken down.

A statement from the North Vietnamese foreign minister said that, on Sunday, "the U.S. imperialists had several aircraft operating in the area of Long Chau island, Cat Be Island and the suburbs of Haiphong to mine the territorial waters of the Nam Trieu estuary and to fire rockets at a number of positions in the suburbs of Haiphong."

The statement also charged that, on Sunday, many U.S. planes and warships "savagely bombarded" numerous population centres in the southern third of North Vietnam below the 20th parallel.

POPE SLAMS PEACE TALK 'HYPOCRISY'

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul denounced today the "hypocrisy" of political and military leaders who pledge to strive for peace but continue to wage wars and spread hatred and violence.

In a message to all heads of states and governments, the pontiff voiced his anguish over "wars which have been going on for years."

He said these wars "have exhausted and rendered impotent all the skills of negotiation and mediation."

During his blessing Sunday, the Pope said it is sad that negotiations for peace in Vietnam will not produce a ceasefire before Christmas, but any agreement must be a just one.

"Without justice, there is no peace," the pontiff said.

Uganda Seizes Estates

KAMPALA, Uganda (CP) — Eight foreign concerns, most of them British-owned, and all foreign tea estates were taken over today in President Idi Amin's latest move to end foregin influence in his East African country.

Amin announced the seizures in a 70-minute broadcast shortly after midnight.

Included in the takeover is a United States firm, International television Sales, owned by Harry Engel, an American living in Perth, Australia.

Amin said the licences of some foreign trading companies also would not be renewed next year but did not name those firms.

The tea estates included 12 owned by Britons and an unspecified number held by Greeks.

The British foreign office said Amin's action is "wholly unjustified and compensation would be demanded."

Amin also announced that British aid personnel, mostly doctors and teachers subsidized by the British government, can stay only if they accept local salary rates.

If not, he said, they must go by the end of the month, under the same restrictions that applied to the 75,000 Asians expelled earlier this year.

Amin also said in his speech that "colonialist" or "imperialist" names of public places in the country will be changed and that Kenya and Tanzania will be asked about renaming Lake Victoria, which the three nations border.

CURIOUS IGUANA peers from behind glass at 300 elementary school students who visited the University of Victoria Sunday. The iguana was part of a multi-faceted display designed to introduce the youngsters to the opportunities available at the university. Among the other attractions were glass blowing, print making and a helium experiment. (See pictures and story page 33.)

HANOI WANTS US, SAYS SHARP

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Sunday that Hanoi as well as Washington wants Canada to serve on a supervisory force in Vietnam if a ceasefire is achieved.

"We've had direct word from Hanoi that they would like Canada to be a member of the supervisory commission," he told a CBC television interviewer.

"They positvely want us. They rely on our objectivity."

But the size and role of the proposed four-country commission has emerged as major barrier to a Washington-Hanoi ceasefire agreement.

Retired Canadian diplomat and ambassador, Chester Ronning, said Sunday that Canada has a duty to take part in a supervisory peace commission in Vietnam.

Meanwhile, Canada and South Vietnam signed a $1 million agreement today for a Canadian-sponsored public health program in South Vietnam's Mekong Delta.

Task Force To Study B.C. Jails

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

A task force established today by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald has been asked to come up with new ways to handle lawbreakers, with special emphasis on drug-associated crime.

At a press conference this morning, Macdonald said the province's correctional services are "bombed out" by cases linked to drug addiction.

The first term of reference for the three-man task force is to examine prison and other detention and treatment institutions and come up with some new kinds of facilities.

Members of the task force are Dr. M. A. Matheson, deputy director of corrections for the province; John Macdonald, of University of British Columbia's social work department, and D. J. Schultz, deputy warden of the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre.

The group has been asked to seek information from outside the province, especially from Ontario and the federal government, and from Chief Judge Lawrence Brahan of B.C.

The force has been asked specifically to look at detention, remand and correctional facilities for juvenile and adult offenders for men and for women.

The task force will also be asked to make a recommendation on which is the appropriate department for corrections to fall under.

Macdonald said he wants a "blueprint" for future development of correctional services, "with special attention to drug dependency, alcoholism and sex offenders and other individuals needing drug forensic clinic services."

"Quite frankly, right now we're bombed out with people related to drug offences in our correctional institutions," Macdonald said.

He said he wants the force to bring in a report "quite quickly." The aim is not "exhaustive, original research. We want them to assemble the known facts about corrections so that we can take

'It's Merely A Super Sensorium'

VANCOUVER (CP) Maurice Egan, the city's social planning director, has prepared a report for city council on a recently opened store which specializes in books and materials relating to sex and love.

Eagan inspected the premises of Ultra Love Products, after the city received complaints from some residents and merchants.

He prepared this report, which he says he will present to city council Tuesday:

"The Ultra Love Products emporium
"Is merely a super sensorium
"It's unintellectual, and maybe bisexual,
"But hardly a pornographorium."

Quebec Booming

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec's gross provincial product increased an estimated 9.6 per cent in 1972, the highest rate of growth in the province since the boom years of 1964-66, Industry Minister Guy Saint-Pierre said Sunday in his annual evaluation of the Quebec economy.

COFFEE-HEART LINK

LONDON (Reuter) — Coffee-drinking appears more closely associated with heart attacks than cigarette smoking, says a report in the latest issue of one of Britain's most authoritative medical magazines, the Lancet.

A report by a team of American researchers from the Boston collaborative drug surveillance program says people who drink more than five cups of coffee a day run twice the risk of having a heart attack as people who drink no coffee at all.

The report says coffee appears more strongly associated with heart attacks than cigarette smoking.

Heart patients used in the survey were admitted to hospitals in the United States, Canada, Israel and New Zealand.

The report says coffee-drinking might just be a feture of the "striving competitive" people believed by some medical researchers to be prone to heart attacks.

Whatever the ranger in coffee, says the report, it is not caffeine.

Caffeine is also present in tea and the report shows that people who drink a lot of tea may have a slightly reduced chance of heart attacks.

Report Offers Postmen 65 Cents; Job Security

OTTAWA (CP) — Wage increases of 65 cents an hour over a contract lasting until Dec. 31, 1974, are recommended for postal workers by the majority report of a conciliation board dealing with the contract dispute between postmen and the government.

The report, released today, is signed by chairman Owen Shime and union nominee William Walsh of the three-man conciliation board.

A minority report, prepared by government nominee Bruce Stewart, suggests wage increases that would amount to raises of about 10 cents an hour less than those in the majority study.

The report also calls for introduction of a third party into consultations to help them reach agreement on controversial issues.

The majority report notes that the government has agreed to reconfirm a guarantee of no layoffs for employees in the bargaining unit which was first made in September, 1970.

The employer will also protect wages of full-time employees directly affected by "wide-range restructuring of jobs" through automation moves now being undertaken in the post office.

The wage recommendations would raise the maximum wages for letter carriers to $4.19 an hour, 15 months after ratification of the contract. Postal clerks' wages would reach a maximum of $4.34 an hour.

The majority recommendations are closer to the union's wage position which originally asked for a 66-cent-an-hour wage boost in a 15-month contract.

The report also suggests retroactive pay dating back to the expiry date of the previous contract of $400, or 25 cents an hour in pay.

In his minority report, Stewart says the public is paying a high price for their postal services.

He said postal workers bring no skills to their job and little on-the-job training is needed except for some highly skilled workers.

The Devil Exists, Says Pope

New York Times

ROME (AP) — A two-page special section on the Devil in Sunday's issue of the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano was interpreted as a reflection of Pope Paul VI's deepening concern over demonic aspects in the present-day world.

Churchmen here said that the 14 columns that the Vatican organ devoted to Satan represented also a counter-offensive by conservatives against liberal theologians in the Netherlands and elsewhere — who tended to dilute traditional Roman Catholic teachings about the Devil.

Some priests and members of the laity in Rome were heard Sunday to express puzzlement in private over the Vatican's emphasis on demonology just before Christmas. The commemoration of the birth of Jesus customarily stresses salvation and the message of the angels, Peace on Earth.

The special section of L'Osservatore Romano had been set in type two weeks ago, but publication was postponed several times because other material was accorded priority by the editors of the Vatican daily.

Speaking about Satan, the Pontiff cited Biblical passages referring to him, and continued: "We thus know that this obscure and disturbing being really exists and that he still operates with treacherous cunning; he is the occult enemy who sows errors and disgrace in human history."

The Pope described the Devil as the "perfidious and astute charmer who manages to insinuate himself into us by way of the senses, of fantasy, of concupiscence, of Utopian logic, of disorderly social contacts."

Demonology, Pope Paul said, was "a very important chapter of Catholic doctrine that ought to be studied again, although this is not being done much today."

The last remark was widely understood as a deploration of a tendency among modern theologians, particularly liberals, to speak generically of evil in the world rather than specifically on a personified devil.

SKYLAB AWAITS 3 ASTRONAUTS

ABOARD TICONDEROGA (AP) — The work of the three Apollo 17 astronauts won't end when they board this recovery ship on splashdown Tuesday. They'll immediately begin tests to aid America's next space venture — Skylab.

Instead of going straight to the Ticonderoga's hospital when a helicopter brings them aboard, Eugene Cernan, Harrison Schmitt and Ronald Evans will enter a new facility called a Skylab Mobile Laboratory.

SML includes six box-like structures each 19 feet long, 14 feet wide and nine feel tall and occupies the rear part of the hangar deck adjoining the section where the returned Apollo 17 spacecraft will be housed.

Each little building has a tag identifying its function; Nutrition endocrinology laboratory, blood laboratory, cardiovascular laboratory and microbiology laboratory.

Mel Richmond, Apollo 17 deputy recovery team leader, said the SML has everything the doctors and technicians will need to examine astronauts for the effects of the moon flight.

The astronauts were on course for a splashdown in the South Pacific at 11:24 a.m. Victoria time Tuesday. Their ship America was operating perfectly.

The astronauts, on their last full day in space and after a night's rest, had to stow equipment, review checklists and clean up the command ship.

If Women Walk the Moon That Will Be the News

The notes of a speech given to a group of local women by Miss Wendy Dey, editor of that section of the Times labelled "Family," have been simmering in the desk drawer I reserve for subjects demanding immediate attention. Only a certain craven cowardice and a desire to be adored by women generally have kept me from addressing myself to the matter more promptly.

Before doing so, I should note that Miss Dey does not approve of the descriptive "Mrs." or "Miss," once that status has been established. In our coverage of her speech, for example, it was Dey said this and Dey said that. Since I would not dream of addressing a woman in that manner you will begin to see that we agree on practically nothing.

Miss Dey was speaking on newspapers and newspapermen and their attitude to women readers and what she had to say appears to have been enormously pleasing to the women of the local Status of Women Action Group, militants all, who love nothing more, it would appear, than the assurance that men are pretty darn mean to them.

In essence, Miss Dey's theme was that the attitude of newspapers towards women is a microcosm of the attitude of our man-oriented society towards women, namely lousy. Traditionally, in Miss Dey's view, women have fared badly in the news pages. Newspapermen look upon them with "indulgent contempt." They stereotype them in the roles of beauty queens, movie stars or victims of rape. They seize upon such things as bra-burning to make the women's liberation movement seem merely humorous. They relegate the news of women's activities to "a special ghetto" of the paper — though this, Miss Dey conceded, is improving, thanks to the efforts of the women in the business.

Suppressing an ugly oath, on first reading this, I made my way across the editorial room floor to Miss Dey's desk, bent my head to the dear girl and enquired: "How do you think I got all this white hair?"

"Wrong kind of shampoo?" Miss Dey guessed.

"No," said I. "I got it from 40 years as a newspaperman worrying about women readers."

It's true, too. At one point, indeed, when I held the title of editorial director on a large newspaper, I commissioned an in-depth survey on readership generally but with particular reference to the tastes of men and women subscribers. Like all surveys it cost an awful lot to prove only what we'd known all along, that women aren't like men.

★ ★ ★

To generalize, men are conscientious readers of newspapers. They will read the foreign news, for example, because they feel a sense of duty about being informed. We got the picture of our Average Male Reader as an expressionless, stolid man who went deliberately from front to back page taking at least a sampling of every significant report.

Women, on the other hand, were clearly more selective and more intense in their reading. On the whole they did not show themselves to be readers seeking to be informed. They were much more interested in people than events. The so-called human interest story with a direct impact on their sentiment or their emotions was read and remembered. More than 90 per per cent of them — an astounding figure — religiously read all of Ann Landers every day.

In other words we found that the woman reader was a breed apart. It may be, as Miss Dey will contend, that women seldom figure in the rows except as beauty queens or movie stars or rape victims, but that was not of the newspaperman's making. When women walk on the moon or make the decisions that shape our world or fight the foolish wars or design great buildings or do anything else that can be legitimately called news that's what it will be, regardless of sex.

Miss Dey talks of the "indulgent contempt" that she fancies to be the attitude of the male editor. That would refer, I suppose, to the kind of stories selected for the woman reader.

So I went to the library and I looked at the last two issues of Chatelaine, a magazine hand-tooled for women. Here are some of the titles in those issues: Birth Control, a Shocking Report; What's Behind Today's New Marriage Styles; How Famous Mothers Cook, Party Clothes to Sew For Children; How I Lost Weight The Beautiful Way; What You Don't Know About Today's Pill; Famous Wives Tell How I Met My Husband; Let Christmas Be Natural in Decorations You Can Make, Food to Serve and Clothes to Wear.

Thirteen of Chatelaine's 14 editors (the exception being the art editor) are women. Surely even Miss Dey wouldn't argue that, in their choice of subjects that sell the magazine, they are being contemptous of their own sex. Or, come to think of it, would she?

True, the "social page" of the past, with its ridiculous, repetitious news of the upper crust ladies, was a kind of ghetto, but what Miss Dey clearly does not know or won't admit is that it was the male editors who widened the horizons of those pages practically over the dead bodies of women readers who wanted precisely that kind of idle gossip.

Certainly, today, that part of the newspaper set aside for news of particular interest to women is no more a "ghetto" than the sports or finance or viewpoint pages that cater legitimately to readers with special interests.

As for bra-burning — which, says Miss Dey, "gives the boys on the editorial desks a merry time, slapping their thighs and guffawing and making up dirty and double-entendre headlines" — I just happen to have been on the wire desk on the cold grey morning when that ceremony was first performed and the news clacked in over the teletype. The truth is that the symbolism escaped us completely and still does.

Make what you will of that, Dey.

CUPE Vote Backs School Strike

Blue collar employees of the Greater Victoria School District voted 91.6 per cent on the weekend in favor of strike action.

And a senior official of the school district said if a strike occurs, schools will have to close.

The contract renewal dispute is between the school district, second largest in British Columbia with 54 schools and 30,878 students, and Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing 269 janitors, groundsmen, tradesmen and laborers.

Union president Fred Newell said the district has "come up with no decent offer at all. If they don't come up with something, this is the only recourse we have — to strike. We don't want to."

Sig Dietze, director of facilities and school support for the district, said negotiations will carry on. He expected the dispute will be settled, as it was two years ago when a strike vote was also taken.

Asked what will happen if there is a strike, he said "the schools will suffer the consequences." Would this mean a shutdown of schools? "Yes." Is there no way schools could carry on? "No."

Newell said the employees want an increase of $1 an hour in a one-year contract, three weeks holiday after one year's work, an increase in sick benefit time, five consecutive shifts for graveyard workers and other changes.

Dietze said the school district has offered seven per cent over one year, which comes out to 25 cents an hour on the lowest pay rates but more on higher ones. He said the union has asked for increases ranging from "26 per cent to over 60 per cent" counting both a general increase and specific classification adjustments.

He said janitors and laborers earn $627 a month with electricians earning $899 a month.

School district officials said this year's wage bill for blue collar employees is $2 million.

An average 25 per cent union demand would add $500,000 and an across-the-board school district offer of seven per cent would add $140,000, they said.

The union is meeting mediation officer Clark Gilmour Wednesday for the second time, and possibly Thursday.

Newell said no strike notice has been given. "We will see how we make out with Mr. Gilmour," he said.

The current contract runs to Dec. 31 and no strike action can be taken until it expires.

Hearty welcome home for Sgt. Glen Parsons of Gatineau from his wife and family

The Navy's Home in Time for Christmas

It wouldn't have mattered if it had been raining cats and dogs — or kangaroos.

The huge sodden crowd of friends and relatives that jammed the jetty in the dockyard today were oblivious to the fact that it wasn't the kind of weather the Chamber of Commerce brags about.

To them it was Christmas Day.

Aboard the three Esquimalt-based ships nosing their way in to port were 700 men they hadn't seen since Aug 28.

Shoreside, the Naden band blared out "I'll be home for Christmas" as HMCS Gatineau, HMCS Qu'Appelle and HMCS Provider came alongside.

It was strictly background music. The band's audience, both ashore and afloat had other things on their mind.

A huddle of women, among them the wife of the Gatineau's skipper, Cmdr. Tom Murphy, flourished a soaked sign of welcome.

Both Provider and Qu'Appelle were festively dressed, Provider alight with huge Christmas stars and Qu'Appelle bearing a sled and reindeer and a sign, Merry Christmas from Down and Under.

Capt. Michael Martin, 2nd Destroyer Escort Squadron commander, took time out to tell of the "Channel fever" that had been sweeping the three ships for the past 48 hours.

"There's been men who couldn't sleep, continuous visits to the ops' room to check on the weather and to find out where we are," he said.

Home fever began accelerating early this morning as customs officers boarded the three ships off Race Rocks to clear the mountains of gifts the men have brought back from Australia and New Zealand.

Martin complimented the men under his command for their "bearing, tact and general behaviour" during their pisit to Australia and New Zealand.

"They made an awful lot of friends and put Canada in a very good light," he said.

He put the record straight on stories from "down under" that the armed forces' green uniforms had not been received with favor:

"That was only one paper that came out with a facetious story. Actually, at all the many press conferences we had about 65 per cent of the questions were about the unification of the three services and the green uniform."

He was asked about the bomb scare aboard Gatineau when she was in Auckland:

"Bomb scares have become the thing there. In fact, there were three while we were there. There's about one a week, usually hoaxes, just as the Gatineau's one was."

How did the Canadian ships stack up against the others in the international exercises?

Without hesitation Martin replied, "They were the best!"

He paused, then added, "Of course, there was a wide range of efficiency. Some ships were fairly fresh out of refit and one had steamed non-stop from the States and they were still catching their breath."

As the press conference ended, the men's relatives jammed the gangway, anxious to get aboard.

Martin was wished a rather superflous "Merry Christmas!"

More Water For Salmon

Members of the Greater Victoria Water Board agreed today the water district has a responsibility to ensure a steady supply of water is always available for spawning salmon in Goldstream — and that allocation will not be jeopardized by "dry years."

As a preliminary step, the board decided to allocate a provisional $100,000 in the 1973 budget for the job of diverting Council Creek into the Sooke Lake watershed.

Water commissioner Ron Upward estimated this would provide another billion gallons a year for the water system. The department of fisheries total requirement for release of water into Goldstream is 1.5 billion gallons.

Council Creek, which drains Council Lake a few miles east of Sooke Lake, now enters the system below the dam and the proposal would be to construct a diverting ditch to bring the water into the main Sooke storage reservoir.

Fisheries department official A. F. Lill said it was possible that some federal money might be available toward this and other projects intended to help the Goldstream salmon, but the board shouldn't "count on it."

Lill speculated whether conservation groups and others interested in the environment might be inerested in helping to finance such a project by subscriptions, but Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said she doubted if that was a realistic argument.

Board chairman, Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen, agreed. He said people were often ready to volunteer labor but when it came to money it was a different story. "Their pockets aren't as deep as their voices," he said.

Upward told the board that there is a public misconception that the Greater Victoria water district has a plentiful supply of water. He said the amount of water available "is extremely variable" depending on rainfall intensity and one in every seven years turns out a "dry" year.

Meeting the federal fisheries department requests under those circumstances is extremely difficult, and he said the position the district finds itself in tends to create "a furor."

Lill said there was much public pressure on his department with regard to Goldstream, which was such a "visible, attractive resource." He said the department is considering various means of maintaining the salmon resource there by using less water, including the possible narrowing of the stream bed in certain areas.

Pollen said whether Goldstream is visible or not is irrelevant. What the board should really be considering is the importance of preserving "an irreplacable life system."

DONORS DIGGING DEEPER

Victoria's Christmas shoppers dug a little deeper into their pockets over the weekend to the delight of the Salvation Army who report that kettle donations have caught up with last year's contributions.

Donations to date total $10,526.34, according to Major Jack Barr, who said there was "great public response" over the weekend to the Army's urgent appeal for contributions.

Last Friday the Christmas fund was $800 behind last year's total, with nearly twice as many families to help.

"We're so grateful," Barr said, "and we want people to know that we are."

This year the army hopes to send food hampers or vouchers, ranging in value from $10 to $25, to nearly 900 families in the city.

Money collected in the nine downtown kettles will also help the Army in providing dinners for men who are living alone at Christmas time and for its League of Mercy visits to nursing homes and institutions.

How much does the Army hope to collect?

"Just enough to pay the bills," Barr says. "But we've got a lot of people to help this year."

Anyone wishing to donate through the mail can send their contribution to the Salvation Army at 769 Pandora. Receipts will be sent out.

Bengalis Await Food, Housing

A 70-year-old man squatted in the ruins of a Bengali village.

He clutched a pathetic collection of old rags, stuffed into a torn jute bag — all that remained of the worldly possessions he once owned as a well-to-do man.

Over and over he kept repeating: "Where has my home gone . . ."

Finally he placed a once-white Gandhi cap on his head and trudged away, dazed by a tragedy he could not understand.

Shakim Bari is one of 10 million Bangladesh refugees.

His story is just one of the many heart-breaking tales Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova can tell of her visits to Bangladesh.

Housing is their main priority. Millions of homes and shelters were destroyed in the war and a scorched earth policy during the occupation felled countless acres of trees.

The USC have therefore initiated a large-scale project to construct at least 1,000 new homes by Christmas.

Each house, which costs $140 and will accomodate six people, measures 10 by 14 feet and is constructed of bamboo matting and a roof of asbestos iron sheets.

But housing is not the only problem.

Widespread hunger and outbreaks of cholera and smallpox need immediate attention.

Money for food and drugs as well as shelter is the aim of the USC's annual fund raising drive.

By Christmas they hope to have collected $1,000,000 in funds and $500,000 in gifts in kind for needy all over the world who suffer as the Bangeli do.

Victorians who wish to donate to the USC fund are asked to send their contributions to P.O. Box 300, Victoria or take them to any Bank of Nova Scotia. Official receipts will be sent from USC headquarters in Ottawa.

Jeans or Jewels—A Matter of Taste

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Jeans may offend the imperial dignity of the Bengal Room at the Empress but, with one or two exceptions, the general dress rule in Victoria eating establishments seems to be anything goes.

Or almost anything, with certain limits of decency.

As mine host at the Keg 'n Cleaver, 500 Fort, observed: "You're not allowed to come naked, but anything else we don't mind."

Similar toleration prevails at the Red Lion Motor Inn, 3366 Douglas, where the manager commented there are no hard-and-fast regulations on customer attire and anyone is admitted "provided he is reasonably presentable and doesn't smell."

But, as columnist Bob Hunter of the Vancouver Sun discovered, the very sight of blue-jeaned legs at the hollowed portals of the Bengal Room sets off shudders of distaste among the staff.

And it almost guarantees the wearer won't be admitted to join the sahibs and memsahibs within — unless he or she registers a strong protest with the management.

To find out how typical such experiences were, two Times reporters, appropriately bejeaned and sweatered but otherwise fairly presentable, tried to get in for lunch.

Unfortunately, we blew it — and proved nothing.

At first, though, it seemed we were getting the Hunter treatment in full, when a pleasant-faced young chap expressed his deep regret he couldn't admit us because of the "dress regulations of the hotel."

Just at that moment, however, another Empress employee with more of a stamp of authority about him sidled up from behind and said quietly "it's all right," and we could certainly enter.

It didn't take any inspired Sherlock Holmes-like deduction to figure out that he, the manager type, had spotted our cameraman lurking in the background, and had smelled two rats.

Cheated, feeling slightly embarrassed, we walked out muttering something about having changed our minds anyway.

We also made a mental note to recommend to Empress manager Louis Finamore that he mark that chap for early promotion.

Taffy Richards, who presides with Welsh conviviality over the Coach and Four in Bastion Square, as well as the McPherson Restaurant in Centennial Square, recalls the only person he ever threw out was sans shirt and shoes — which was "carrying informality a little bit far."

Richards observes it's somewhat difficult to formulate a policy on acceptable garb in these days when not to be mod is to be accused of squareness, and even the affluent folk dress casually.

"You have to be flexible, especially in the summer when the tourists are in town. A lot of them seem to be from California and they tried to dress casually," he remarked.

"We certainly don't cater for the crowned heads of Europe here."

"More or less casual" is the only policy of the Princess Mary, where the summer clientele includes camper-based tourists who are anything but formal.

"But we do have to insist sometimes that they wear shoes," said business manager Gordon Schoor.

Strangely enough, Oak Bay, that bastion of conservative good taste, displays a certain inconsistency when it comes to eating-out clothes.

The Oak Bay Marina admits some customers have been turned away for wearing jeans, and "a tie is preferred."

But the Oak Bay Beach Hotel allows jeans at lunchtime as long as the wearers look "reasonably well dressed." However, a jacket and tie are obligatory for dinner.

Hy's Steak House, 777 Douglas, has no lunchtime custom and only relaxes its jacket-and-tie rule for dinner in the summer months.

Sam Lane's Olde England Inn, 429 Lampson, professes a "quite informal" atmosphere but, really, the establishment would be happier if people didn't wear jeans.

Jean wearers, though, wouldn't be turned away.

Error Aided Escape

A 23-year-old prisoner escaped police custody through "an administrative error," Crown Prosecutor John Macintyre admitted in provincial court today.

Ronald James Page, who pleaded guilty today to escaping custody, earlier was sentenced in Victoria County Court to 18 months for possession of a restricted weapon. He was being transferred Dec. 9 to a forestry camp on the mainland when he jumped to freedom. He was recaptured last Friday.

Macintyre pointed out today, however, that Page was due to appear on a drug trafficking charge in Victoria provincial court today — and should not have been transferred.

"The transfer to a forestry camp was an administrative error," Macintyre said.

Page was remanded to Tuesday for sentencing on the escape charge.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Could you please tell me the name of the movie that was made at the south end of Patricia Bay Airport around 1942?—A.F.

A. The film you are probably referring to is Commandos Came at Dawn, filmed around Mill Bay starting in August, 1942. The movie, starring Paul Muni, was made for general theatre use and also for civilian defence groups, showing techniques of guerrilla warfare.

Q. One speaks of the weft and the woof of a woven fabric. Can these words be made plural by adding 's'? This question arose during a game of scrabble. — E.S.

A. The plural is woofs and wefts, according to Webster's dictionary.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

First Woman Doctor

Recently, it occurred to me that I knew very little about our first modern woman physician, Elizabeth Blackwell, so I was very interested in a book about her life by Dorothy Clarke Wilson, entitled "Lone Woman."

What is remarkable is the struggle that Elizabeth Blackwell had to make, throughout her difficult life, against the pettiness and closed minds of doctors and medical societies.

Elizabeth was born in Bristol, England, in 1821, and her struggle for an education began very early. There was no school available where an intelligent young girl could go to receive a good education, and a boarding school offered her all that was deemed necessary for a young lady of that day. She was taught to read and write a little, to dance, to play music, to paint pictures, and to do some needlework.

In 1846, about the time that anesthesia was discovered, Elizabeth made up her mind fully that she was going to stydy medicine. There followed a most discouraging time when college after college refused to admit her. Finally, in 1847, a little college in Geneva, New York, accepted her. But her troubles were only beginning. She was asked by the professor not to come to lectures on reproduction. When she objected, the question was put to the class, and they voted to allow her to come and listen.

The life of Dr. Blackwell was never easy, but she felt that she had achieved a great triumph when the medical council in England registered her as a physician. Later, she was invited to England to do what she had done for American women, in her fearless battle against some of the most virulent social evils.

When Elizabeth died, shortly before she was 90, some of the doors that had been closed to her as an intelligent young woman were opened, and she had served as an inspiration to many Victorian women who were uncomfortable and unhappy with the limitations and prejudices expressed by society.

U.S. Again Bombs North

WASHINGTON (CP)—The United States has resumed full-scale bombing of North Vietnam and will continue until Hanoi agrees to a settlement of the war, the White House announced today.

The White House said President Nixon ordered the resumption of bombing of North Vietnam "to cope with another enemy buildup" and forestall a possible Communist offensive.

Presidential press secretary Ronald Ziegler refused to link Nixon's decision to the current stalemate in the peace talks. He said the "road to a negotiated peace is wide open. We want a rapid settlement." (See Kissinger report on Page 3.)

Ziegler said the action is consistent with the policy Nixon outlined in a May 8 speech and said the policy "will continue until such time as a settlement is arrived at . . ."

In a televised speech May 8, Nixon said the full-scale bombing of North Vietnam and the mining of its harbors would continue until there was a ceasefire throughout Indochina and all American prisoners had been released by Hanoi.

Defence Secretary Melvin Laird made the first Washington announcement of the lifting of restrictions.

He told reporters: "Air operations are being conducted throughout North Vietnam at the present time."

Before Laird spoke to reporters, North Vietnam claimed U.S. planes had dropped mines in Haiphong harbor and rocketed suburbs of North Vietnam's chief port.

The United States never did remove minefields from the approaches to seven North Vietnamese harbors, including Haiphong.

Nixon ordered bombing of North Vietnam cut back to the 20th parallel in late October in an apparent gesture aimed at bringing the peace negotiations to a satisfactory conclusion.

His action at the time, in effect spared the most populous area of North Vietnam, including Hanoi and Haiphong, while permitting the U.S. planes to continue attacking North Vietnamese supply movements throughout the less populated North Vietnamese area above South Vietnam.

Laird briefly acknowledged the lifting of bombing restrictions on North Vietnam two days after Henry Kissinger, chief U.S. peace negotiator and President Nixon's security adviser, had reported negotiations toward a ceasefire were at an impasse.

Kissinger blamed the North Vietnamese for coming up with what he called "frivolous" proposals and changing their position on issues he felt had been resolved.

Renewal of the air war on Haiphong and Hanoi in an attempt to force North Vietnam to accept U.S. peace terms had been predicted after Kissinger's announcement Saturday that his negotiations with Hanoi's Le Duc Tho had broken down.

A statement from the North Vietnamese foreign minister said that, on Sunday, "the U.S. imperialists had several aircraft operating in the area of Long Chau island, Cat Be Island and the suburbs of Haiphong to mine the territorial waters of the Nam Trieu estuary and to fire rockets at a number of positions in the suburbs of Haiphong."

The statement also charged that, on Sunday, many U.S. planes and warships "savagely bombarded" numerous population centres in the southern third of North Vietnam below the 20th parallel.

AMIN GRABS ESTATES

KAMPALA, Uganda (CP) — Eight foreign concerns, most of them British-owned, and all foreign tea estates were taken over today in President Idi Amin's latest move to end foreign influence in his East African country.

The British foreign office said Amin's action is "wholly unjustified and compensation would be demanded."

Barrett Slams Davis

Premier Dave Barrett today angrily attacked federal Environment Minister Jack Davis for letter-to-the-editor Davis wrote to a Vancouver newspaper in connection with federal-provincial discussions on a coal port at Squamish.

Barrett accused Davis of playing "cheap politics" on the issue and said he would never talk to Davis privately again, but only in the presence of reporters.

Barrett called Davis "persona non grata" in any negotiations affecting B.C. and said Davis' statements in the letter to the Vancouver Sun have "put in jeopardy" talks coming up later this week between B.C. and Ottawa on an alternative route to ship Prairie wheat through the Fraser Valley.

Davis, in his letter, comments on a Sun editorial on the Squamish issue. He says Barrett is "all for" the coal port at Squamish and then states his own personal opposition to it.

Barrett vehemently denied he supports the coal port at Squamish, saying he has asked for environmental studies to be made to determine if it is ecologically safe to establish a coal port there. The study is underway now with a report expected shortly.

Davis says in his letter that he favors locating a coal port at Prince Rupert. But Barrett said his government is looking at "a number of alternatives" and is not committed to any single area as a location.

Barrett is scheduled to meet later this week with federal transport minister Jean Marchand and minister of regional economic expansion Don Jamieson.

"Those talks are now in jeopardy as a result of what Mr. Davis said," Barrett said. "If Davis is going to be this childish and if this is the way they are going to be, well they can just forget it."

CURIOUS IGUANA peers from behind glass at 300 elementary school students who visited the University of Victoria Sunday. The iguana was part of a multi-faceted display designed to introduce the youngsters to the opportunities available at the university. Among the other attractions were glass blowing, print making and a helium experiment. (See pictures and story page 33.)

HANOI WANTS US, SAYS SHARP

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Sunday that Hanoi as well as Washington wants Canada to serve on a supervisory force in Vietnam if a ceasefire is achieved.

"We've had direct word from Hanoi that they would like Canada to be a member of the supervisory commission," he told a CBC television interviewer.

"They positively want us. They rely on our objectivity."

But the size and role of the proposed four-country commission has emerged as a major barrier to a Washington-Hanoi ceasefire agreement.

Retired Canadian diplomat and ambassador, Chester Ronning, said Sunday that Canada has a duty to take part in a supervisory peace commission in Vietnam.

Meanwhile, Canada and South Vietnam signed a $1 million agreement today for a Canadian-sponsored public health program in South Vietnam's Mekong Delta.

Task Force To Study B.C. Jails

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

A task force established today by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald has been asked to come up with new ways to handle lawbreakers, with special emphasis on drug-associated crime.

At a press conference this morning, Macdonald said the province's correctional services are "bombed out" by cases linked to drug addiction.

The first term of reference for the three-man task force is to examine prison and other detention and treatment institutions and come up with some new kinds of facilities.

Members of the task force are Dr. M. A. Matheson, deputy director of corrections for the province; John Macdonald, of University of British Columbia's social work department, and D. J. Schultz, deputy warden of the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre.

The group has been asked to seek information from outside the province, especially from Ontario and the federal government, and from Chief Judge Lawrence Brahan of B.C.

The force has been asked specifically to look at detention, remand and correctional facilities for juvenile and adult offenders, both men and women.

The task force will also be asked to make a recommendation on which is the appropriate department for corrections to fall under.

Macdonald said he wants a "blueprint" for future development of correctional services, "with special attention to drug dependency, alcoholism and sex offenders and other individuals needing drug forensic clinic services."

"Quite frankly, right now we're bombed out with people related to drug offences in our correctional institutions," Macdonald said.

He said he wants the force to bring in a report "quite quickly." The aim is not "exhaustive, original research. We want them to assemble the known facts about corrections so that we can take

'It's Merely A Super Sensorium'

VANCOUVER (CP) Maurice Egan, the city's social planning director, has prepared a report for city council on a recently opened store which specializes in books and materials relating to sex and love.

Eagan inspected the premises of Ultra Love Products after the city received complaints from some residents and merchants.

He prepared this report, which he says he will present to city council Tuesday:

"The Ultra Love Products emporium
"Is merely a super sensorium
"It's unintellectual, and maybe bisexual.
"But hardly a pornographorium."

NEWS BRIEFS

Quebec Booming

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec's gross provincial product increased an estimated 9.6 per cent in 1972, the highest rate of growth in the province since the boom years of 1964-66, Industry Minister Guy Saint-Pierre said Sunday in his annual evaluation of the Quebec economy.

Vancouver Flooding

VANCOUVER (CP) — City works crews received more than 50 flood distress calls Saturday after an overnight rainfall of 1.26 inches melted about six inches of snow that had accumulated in the past few days.

Barrett to U.S.

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — Gov. Dan Evans and British Columbia Premier David Barrett have agreed to meet early next year to discuss common problems of the state and province, the governor's office said today. Neil McReynolds, Evans' press secretary, said a tentative date of Jan. 15-16 has been set for the meeting scheduled for Evans' office.

COFFEE-HEART LINK

LONDON (Reuter) — Coffee-drinking appears more closely associated with heart attacks than cigarette smoking, says a report in the latest issue of one of Britain's most authoritative medical magazines, the Lancet.

A report by a team of American researchers from the Boston collaborative drug surveillance program says people who drink more than five cups of coffee a day run twice the risk of having a heart attack as people who drink no coffee at all.

The report says coffee appears more strongly associated with heart attacks than cigarette smoking.

Heart patients used in the survey were admitted to hospitals in the United States, Canada, Israel and New Zealand.

The report says coffee-drinking might just be a feature of the "striving competitive" people believed by some medical researchers to be prone to heart attacks.

Whatever the danger in coffee, says the report, it is not caffeine.

Caffeine is also present in tea and the report shows that people who drink a lot of tea may have a slightly reduced chance of heart attacks.

Report Offers Postmen 65 Cents; Job Security

OTTAWA (CP) Wage increases of 65 cents an hour over a contract lasting until Dec. 31, 1974, are recommended for postal workers by the majority report of a conciliation board dealing with the contract dispute between postmen and the government.

The report, released today, is signed by chairman Owen Shime and union nominee William Walsh of the three-man conciliation board.

A minority report, prepared by government nominee Bruce Stewart, suggests wage increases that would amount to raises of about 10 cents an hour less than those in the majority study.

The majority report notes that the government has agreed to reconfirm a guarantee of no layoffs for employees in the bargaining unit which was first made in September, 1970.

The wage recommendations would raise the maximum wages for letter carriers to $4.19 an hour, 15 months after ratification of the contract. Postal clerks' wages would reach a maximum of $4.34 an hour.

The majority recommendations are closer to the union's wage position which originally asked for a 66-cent-an-hour wage boost in a 15-month contract.

The report also suggests retroactive pay dating back to the expiry date of the previous contract of $400, or 25 cents an hour in pay.

In his minority report, Stewart says the public is paying a high price for their postal services.

He said postal workers bring no skills to their job and little on-the-job training is needed except for some highly skilled workers.

The report is "the stupidest thing I've ever heard of," Guy Morissette, president of the Montreal letter carriers' union.

"We will definitely propose that Montreal area workers reject the report," he said in an interview. "If it's taken seriously there will be a strike for sure."

The Devil Exists, Says Pope

New York Times

ROME (AP) — A two-page special section on the Devil in Sunday's issue of the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano was interpreted as a reflection of Pope Paul VI's deepening concern over demonic aspects in the present-day world.

Churchmen here said that the 14 columns that the Vatican organ devoted to Satan represented also a counter-offensive by conservatives against liberal theologians — in the Netherlands and elsewhere — who tended to dilute traditional Roman Catholic teachings about the Devil.

Some priests and members of the laity in Rome were heard Sunday to express puzzlement in private over the Vatican's emphasis on demonology just before Christmas. The commemoration of the birth of Jesus customarily stresses salvation and the message of the angels, Peace on Earth.

The special section of L'Osservatore Romano had been set in type two weeks ago, but publication was postponed several times because other material was accorded priority by the editors of the Vatican daily.

Speaking about Satan, the Pontiff cited Biblical passages referring to him, and continued: "We thus know that this obscure and disturbing being really exists and that he still operates with treacherous cunning; he is the occult enemy who sows errors and disgrace in human history."

The Pope described the Devil as the "perfidious and astute charmer who manages to insinuate himself into us by way of the senses, of fantasy, of concupiscence, of Utopian logic, of disorderly social contacts."

Demonology, Pope Paul said, was "a very important chapter of Catholic doctrine that ought to be studied again, although this is not being done much today."

The last remark was widely understood as a deploration of a tendency among modern theologians, particularly liberals, to speak generically of evil in the world rather than specifically on a personified devil.

SKYLAB AWAITS 3 ASTRONAUTS

ABOARD TICONDEROGA (AP) — The work of the three Apollo 17 astronauts won't end when they board this recovery ship on splashdown Tuesday. They'll immediately begin tests to aid America's next space venture — Skylab.

Instead of going straight to the Ticonderoga's hospital when a helicopter brings them aboard, Eugene Cernan, Harrison Schmitt and Ronald Evans will enter a new facility called a Skylab Mobile Laboratory.

Mel Richmond, Apollo 17 deputy recovery team leader, said the SML has everything the doctors and technicians will need to examine astronauts for the effects of the moon flight.

The astronauts were on course for a splashdown in the South Pacific at 11:24 a.m. Victoria time Tuesday. Their ship America was operating perfectly.

The astronauts, on their last full day in space and after a night's rest, had to stow equipment, review checklists and clean up the command ship.

The spacemen also had to secure their record cargo of moon rocks, three canisters of film and other science treasures gathered during the 13-day mission to the moon.

In the last major exploit of the mission, Evans made a 11-minute walk in deep space Sunday to retrieve film canisters from a part of the ship which won't return to earth and bring them to the safety of America's cabin.
